

WWI vet Horton, 106, remembered for community service

By JACLYN GRAHAM

Until the age of 99, Floyd Horton was placing flags on seven local cemeteries for Memorial Day each year. Even as he approached the century mark, Horton and his wife, Clare, were placing 690 flags.

On Wednesday, May 19, 106-year-old Floyd W. Horton passed away at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in North Chicago. Horton was a life-long Lake County area resident, having lived in Antioch during the latter years of his life.

Once when asked to describe the secret to his lasting health, Horton replied: "I never drank, smoked, or chewed anything. Water is good enough."

In 1917, Horton was drafted into the U.S. Army serving with the 131st Infantry, Company C during WWI. A year later, Horton received his Purple Heart in combat during the Meuse River of the Argonne Forest Offensive in France.

An explosive bullet destroyed the elbow of Horton's right arm, and he was subsequently discharged on Sept. 4, 1920. He was the oldest known WWI veteran in Illinois.

Horton married Clare Drom in Antioch on Nov. 20, 1923. After being married, Horton farmed, and later worked as a bookkeeper for Antioch Lumber. For awhile he made wooden rowboats and his wife would paint them.

In Antioch, Horton was an active life member of the American Legion Post #748 where he worked with veteran's affairs, and was also a member of the VFW Post #4551.

"Horton was very gung ho for veterans, the American Legion, and the VFW," said Al Himber, Antioch's VFW Assistant Public Relations Director.

Horton was dedicated to fishing, as well as teaching his nieces and nephews how to fish.

"He had a heck of a sense of humor, very dry, but he was one funny guy," said Himber. "People also saw him as a very knowledgeable man."

In 1998 Horton was presented with the Legion of Honor, France's Highest military award, due to his service in France during WWI.

After living through three wars, Horton was bothered by nothing and lived life to the fullest. He is survived by his wife, Clare and numerous nieces and

Widow earns Oprah's 'Great Mom' tribute

Cecilia Wapole, 30, of Lake Villa did not choose to be a single mother. In fact, almost three years ago, she had a wonderful and loving husband, beautiful children, and a home to call their own. But the luxury of a "normal" life was lost all too soon.

Her husband Kevin's accidental death left Wapole alone, to care for her three children under the age of five, and to take on responsibilities of both mother and father. Since then, Wapole has made raising her children a full-time job.

It was Wapole's determination and unlimited attention, care, and love for her children, despite the loss of her husband and their father, that compelled her sister Theresa to submit a letter to Oprah Winfrey for the "Great Moms" monthly show.

The purpose of the show is to recognize the sacrifices and accomplishments of outstanding mothers. Out of nearly 70,000 submissions, Theresa's and seven others were chosen to be part of the "Great Moms Finale" for the season's end.

When Wapole's sisters invited her to go to the Oprah Show, she was willing, but reluctant to leave her children for the day. She would soon discover that her motherly dedication was the reason behind her unforgettable trip downtown.

Before the show began, they mentioned that there was one woman in the audience who did not yet know she had been picked as a "Great Mom."

"I thought it was the woman next to me because her daughter kept pointing at her and smiling," said Wapole.

The show proceeded, featuring extraordinary mothers with amazing stories of love and devotion. Children, husbands, and parents appeared on stage in honor of the mothers.

When they finally called the mystery mother's name, Wapole was shocked.

"They had to call my name three times because I didn't know they picked me," said Wapole. "I kept looking at the woman next to me, waiting for her to stand up."

Once she realized she was chosen, Wapole went on stage next to Oprah while her sister read her letter aloud. They played a tape of Wapole's husband and children, and her two daughters, Megan and Ashleigh greeted her on stage wearing beautiful dresses.

Her camera-shy son Nathan stood backstage. Other members of Wapole's family also appeared in Poetry, music join java on Main

Poetry readings and displays of fine art are coming to Java Garden, 881 Main Street.

Interested artists and writers are asked to contact Patty Hermes if they wish to read their writing, display their art work, or play their instruments in the coffee shop.

The first poetry readings are scheduled for Friday, June 4 at 7:30 p.m. "We'll have a collection of people to do poetry readings," Hermes said.

"I'm organizing the 'Culture Shock of Antioch'—live poetry readings and other verbal expressions of writing," she said. "We're just going to have so much fun with this."

Already Greg Spinner and Marianne Giannis, owners of Java Gardens, are hanging art on the walls among the dried flower arrangements.

"They are having live music coming up," said Hermes. "They have local artists displaying their work already."

"One of my poems will be on display."

"For all poetry readings, please call me at 847-395-4465," Hermes said. "We want artists with free expressions of art to contact us."

For other artistic expressions—paintings, graphics, sculpture, music—people can call Java Gardens, 838-6361.

Her comedy connection business provides entertainers such as bands, clowns, musicians, comics, and whatever else people need for entertainment.

She is herself an author of poetry and is working on a collection of her poems for publication.

OPRAH: Mom honored

support.

As yet another surprise, each of the eight mothers received a "Great Moms Getaway" trip to Hawaii for themselves and a guest, and a plaque for their picture with Oprah.

Wapole was so overcome by surprise that she could not remember how or if she answered Oprah's questions. Viewing it would enable her to take it all in. The show was to air on Wednesday, May 26th.

Although she was recognized for being an incredible mother, Wapole said, "It's all in a day's work." "I struggle just like everybody else," continued Wapole. "I want my children to grow up strong, confident, and good people."

"Every mother should be honored," said Wapole. "I just do what every other parent that loves their children would do." She tries hard to keep her children active, by rushing ing to and from sports games and making sure they get to play with their friends.

Her days are often tiring and hectic, but the time she spends with her children is priceless and rewarding. Single parenthood is by no means an ideal situation for Wapole, but she still manages to provide her children with everything that she and her husband had planned for them before his death.

Although she has been through very difficult times, Wapole's spirits are high. This heroic mother said that without the support system that she has, it would be impossible to manage every day.

"I couldn't have gotten this far without the help of my family and friends," said Wapole. "They inspire, teach, and help me to survive." She thanks them for their understanding and selflessness.

Watkins brings new skills to village safety

By KENNETH PATCHEN
Staff Reporter

Antioch Police Chief Charles Watkins discussed his Federal Bureau of Investigation training experience in Quantico, Virginia with village trustees on Monday, April 19.

"I had a very enlightening time," Watkins said. He told trustees that it was an excellent program for police administrators.

Watkins said the value of the program extended beyond classroom instruction. He also learned from classmates who were themselves professional police administrators. There were 275 people in the class who studied in different sections.

"I learned as much from them as I did from listening to the lectures," he said.

Watkins focused on studies in seven areas.

"We really covered the Sociology of gangs," he said. They studied how recruitment works, the types of gangs, and how to manage gangs when they come to a community.

"It's an up-and-coming thing in our country," Watkins said.

Watkins studied labor relations and collective bargaining in the law enforcement field. This included how to administer and negotiate contracts and how to build a team that will work for the department and the community.

A third area of study included statement analysis. This involves techniques for detecting deception in statements made by offenders. He expected this training to be very useful for the department.

One area of study focused on forensics. "It was how to handle crime scenes," he said.

Watkins not only study the use of deadly force, but also helped prepare a training videotape. The studies were about police shootings and the circumstances, policies, and procedures related to firearms discharge.

A final area of study was related to the use of physical fitness in police work. "We took a lot of classroom instruction in this."

Physically fit police officers are known to have improved work performance, plus it helps to manage stress associated with their professional responsibilities.

Lindenhurst gets grants for officers, equipment

By MICHAEL H. BABICZ
Correspondent

Public safety within the village of Lindenhurst has received a boost, all at no cost to the taxpayers.

The village board was notified at its May 24 meeting of the receipt of nearly $87,000 in grant awards for three different programs.

The first is for $11,631 from the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority. This federally funded block grant is to be used for the purchase of mobile computer equipment, two laptops and associated software, to be installed in squad cars.

This will allow Lindenhurst officers in the field to access state and federal data. It also allows receiving and transmitting direct E-911 dispatch information at the local level from the public safety answering point.

The program calls for the village to contribute 10 percent of the estimated cost, with the federal portion to total 90 percent.

The second grant is from COPS Universal Hiring Program for $75,000.

These funds will be used to hire an additional full-time officer. The grant provides for partial funding of the position at a rate of $25,000 per year for the next three years.

During 1995, Lindenhurst received its first such COPS grant.

According to village officials, Lindenhurst is in full compliance with the requirements of the grants programs and any associated audit procedures. All earlier grant money from the COPS program have been used to add an additional police officer.

The third grant is for $750 from the Fel-Pro Co.'s Employee Neighborhood Program.

Trustee Fred Messmer, a retired Fel-Pro employee, informed the board the grant will be used for the purchase of a camera and emergency number magnets.

The funds have been turned over to the Neighborhood Watch program. Plans are to use the camera for identification photos of children. The magnets would be distributed free to area residents.

Messmer noted Fel-Pro's program has contributed over $7,000 to Lindenhurst to date.

LAKE VILLA

DUI

David E. Heater, 33, 230 Briar Hill, Round Lake Park, was arrested on charges of improper lane usage and DUI (street) after a traffic stop by Lake Villa police on May 22.

At 3:07 a.m., a Lake Villa squad car responded to a call by Lindenhurst Police of a possible intoxicated driver heading westbound on Grand Avenue at Route 83.

The responding officer observed a Red Chevy Blazer heading westbound on Grand Avenue and followed the vehicle for three blocks. The left tires of the Blazer crossed the center line into oncoming traffic two times, according to reports. The officer pulled the vehicle over in the Prime Time Saloon parking lot.

The driver, Heater, told the officer he was driving on tickets from the Lake County Sheriff's Department. The officer observed a strong smell of alcohol on Heater's breath.

Heater failed field tests at the scene and was taken to the Lake Villa Police Department, where he refused a breath test.

Heater called a friend for bond money and posted $300 cash bond. He awaits a June 11 court date.

Possession of cannabis

Andrew James Bell, 26, 2931 27th St., #103, Zion, was arrested for driving with no valid registration and possession of cannabis.

On May 19 at 6:24 p.m., a Lake Villa police officer observed a red Chevy Cavalier traveling westbound on Route 132 from McKinley Avenue. The officer noted the registration sticker was expired.

The officer stopped the car on Route 132 at Oak Lane and spoke with the driver, Bell. Bell said the car belonged to a friend and seemed to be overly nervous for a routine traffic stop, according to reports.

Police asked Bell if they could search the car and Bell consented. Upon searching the car, they found a purple metal/plastic cannabis pipe with resin, a small amount of cannabis (1.5 grams in a plastic bag), and a ceramic cannabis pipe with resin and a small amount of cannabis in the bowl.

Bell was arrested and transported to Lake Villa Police Department. He was released on an I-bond pending a June 9 court date.

Suspended drivers license

Dennis J. Tirlea, 20, 700 N. Adams, Macomb, was arrested on charges of driving on a suspended license, speeding, and no driving with no insurance.

On May 16 at 3:03 a.m., a Lake Police police officer was running radar on Grand Avenue at Oak Lane when he observed a car traveling at a high rate of speed (45 in a 30 mph zone).

Police stopped the car and spoke to the driver, Tirlea. A vehicle check found the license was suspended for a previous DUI arrest.

He was placed into custody and released on bond pending a June 9 court date.

LINDENHURST

Possession of a controlled substance

William J. Kearns III, 39, of Lindenhurst was stopped by Lindenhurst police on Friday, May 14 at 9:05 p.m. at Linden and Deep Lake Rd. for an improper left turn. After receiving Kearns' permission to search the vehicle, an officer found a small, white object on the floor, later identified as 1.5 grams of cocaine. Kearns claimed he had purchased the cocaine for a friend.

He has been charged with possession of a controlled substance, improper left turn, and no valid insurance.

Unlawful possession of drug paraphernalia

Beverly J. Lopez, 41, of Richmond, was stopped by Lindenhurst police on Friday, May 21 at 9:16 a.m. at the west entrance of the Eagle grocery store parking lot. Lopez, who was turning left onto Munn Rd., failed to signal when required.

Upon contact with Lopez, an officer found her license to be suspended and the vehicle uninsured. The police had received an anonymous phone call sometime earlier, stating that Lopez had been driving with a suspended license. While doing vehicle inventory, the officer discovered an aluminum foil smoking pipe used for smoking cannabis.

Lopez has been charged with failure to signal when required, driving with a suspended license, operating an uninsured vehicle, and unlawful possession of drug paraphernalia. A court date has been set in Grayslake for July 7.

Charged with DUI

Russell W. Molitor, 52, of Lindenhurst, was stopped by Lindenhurst police on Sunday, May 23 at 12:05 a.m. at Hawthorn and Fairfield for weaving his vehicle so others couldn't pass without hitting him. After Molitor was pulled over, the driver who was behind him did also. He had been trying to notify police by a cell phone of Molitor's erratic driving.

A court date in Waukegan has been set for June 22.

Program to send letters to NATO military personnel

By MICHAEL H. BABICZ
Correspondent

Lindenhurst will take the lead on an old-time idea with a new twist. It might interest Antioch residents.

At the recommendation of Village of Lindenhurst Trustee Patrick Dunham, trustees unanimously agreed to spearhead a "Yellow Ribbon" campaign to recognize service personnel participating in the Operation Allied Force campaign in Kosovo.

The program, "Any Service Member Mail," includes displaying a yellow ribbon on the mailbox, tree, fence, or automobile along with writing a letter to someone in the military service.

"All you need to do is write a letter to any person in general," Dunham stated in prepared remarks. "Then address the envelope as ANY SERVICE (OR FAMILY) MEMBER. Put one of the following addresses on it and mail it."

For Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps land forces: ANY SERVICE MEMBER, Operations in the FRY, APO AE 09397-0001;

For Navy and Marine Corps personnel aboard ship: ANY SERVICE MEMBER, Operations in the FRY, APO AE 09398-0001;

For families in Germany: ANY SERVICE MEMBER, Operations in the FRY, APO AE 09399-0001.

"At this point, this is a local initiative," said Mayor Paul Baumunk. "It shouldn't be local, regional, or state. It should be national. Lindenhurst is going to take the initiative."

Baumunk will forward letters to state and national representatives for the Lindenhurst area to make them aware of the drive and to encourage them to make a wide-spread program.

Trustee Fred Messmer noted the local Veteran's of Foreign Wars Post, which Dunham is to take over as commander, will discuss how it might expand the project at its next meeting on Thursday, May 13.

"This was a tremendous morale booster to those of us in the theater of operations," Dunham noted, referring to the Gulf conflict. "The biggest boost came not just from getting the letters, but from the show of support from the folks back home for my comrades and myself. Those letters made the long days and nights easier to deal with."

"I am hoping everyone will take a few moments and write a short letter to thank our service members in harms way for the job they are doing," Dunham said.

Caribbean Island Happenings

by JIM WARREN,
President, North Star Travel, Inc.

If sun, sand and fun are not enough to convince you to visit a Caribbean island this year, here is a list of some neat happenings coming up.

If you visit the island of Antigua July 24 to August 3, be ready to party. It's the 42nd annual Carnival with parades, fireworks, and music.

July 5-10 attracts windsurfers from around the world to the windy island of Aruba for the Hi-Winds Pro-Am World Challenge.

Sailing enthusiasts will want to be on Grand Bahamas Island June 19-21 to watch sailing sloops compete in the fifth annual "Championship of the Seas."

June 27 marks the end of the sugarcane harvest season on Barbados and the beginning of "Crop Over Festival", one of the biggest parties of the year.

Bonaire, an island known for SCUBA diving, will celebrate the third annual Dive Festival November 6-13.

July 23 is the start of a two-week annual Emancipation Festival Celebration on the British Virgin Island of Tortola, featuring calypso shows and pageants.

Aviation buffs will want to visit the Cayman Islands June 7 for International Aviation Week. Flying machines from planes to parachutes will be on display, as well as an air/sea show.

Jazz lovers will want to visit Jamaica the week of June 13 for the ninth annual Ocho Rios Jazz Festival. Reggae fans will want to wait until August 1 for the Montego Bay Reggae Sumfest.

June 10-13 also beckons jazz enthusiasts to Puerto Rico for the ninth annual Heineken JazzFest at Sixto Escobar Park in San Juan.

It's Carnival time on St. Lucia July 19-20. Calypso music and dancing fill the streets.

June 17-24 is deep sea fishing time at the St. Martin Billfish Tournament where anglers attempt to catch the largest blue marlin.

If you're on the islands of Trinidad & Tobago during November you may meet such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie or Wynton Marsalis, as they are known to participate in the Pan Jazz Festival held there.

June 19 through July 5, St. John of the USVI is the place to be. It's Carnival time combined with an Independence Day bash.

Maybe this will give you just the reason to visit our southern island neighbors.

Line Dancing for the Yunguns'

Ever since Miss Liz (i.e. the infamous Old Retired Lizard) was bitten by the Line Dance Bug, she has been trying to incorporate a few line dance steps into the curriculum at Camp Crayon. So far Miss Debbie, the Camp Director, has been able to hold her off, but lo and behold, if there's a will, there's a way and Miss Liz has come up with a fantastic new plan. She has decided to take all her Line Dance knowledge and wisdom and share it with all the little people of Antioch and the surrounding communities.

So starting this summer she will be teaching Line Dance Lessons for Young People ages 8 to 13 years of age. Both boys and girls are invited to come out on Wednesday mornings from 9:30 until 11:30 a.m. The lessons, which are sponsored by the Antioch Parks and Recreation Department, will be held at Grass Lake School which is located 1 1/2 miles west of Route 59 on Grass Lake Road and cost $30 for residents and $40 for non-residents. They will begin June 16 and run for six weeks. Advanced registration is required and may be done at the Parks Department at

JINGLE FROM PRINGLE

For more information you may contact either Liz Schmehl, the Line Dance Queen, of, I mean instructor, at 395-5380 or Laurie Stahl, the Parks director, at 395-2160.

The minimum class size will be 20, the maximum class size will be 40. Line dancing is fun and easy to learn not to mention a great way to make new friends and wonderful exercise for the yunguns'.

So have the kids turn off the TVs and VCRs, put away their Nintendos and Game Boys, and come out for a summer of yee-hah.

And so goes another "Jingle from Pringle."

THE CLIPBOARD

John Phelps

A toast-to track!

As I step into my new role as sports editor, I'd like to take a second to salute and bid a final farewell to first, the departed Brendan O'Neill, whom I have succeeded. Brendan has since moved on to new ventures and I know he will produce equally effective results like he did here at Lakeland.

Now, salutations to all of the track teams, especially the seniors I have had the pleasure of covering this season. All of the track teams, both boys and girls, produced many great achievements and consequently, saw me develop a tremendous appreciation for what these athletes do and how hard they work at it.

Let's start by saluting senior Kristen Pace from Warren, who successfully defended her state title in the high jump last weekend.

Then we have Eric Ahlberg, who finished third in last week's sectional following his personal best in the shot put.

Barb Teeling, who is headed to Carthage next fall and will play volleyball and run track, holds the Wauconda school record in the discus and I trust she'll be just as damaging in the collegiate ranks.

Cindy Aikus from Antioch is another senior who capped off a great career following her fine showing in the triple jump at the state meet last week.

Perhaps one of the most inspiring people I've had the pleasure of meeting is senior D.T. Anthony of Grant. Look for a story on D.T. next week and you'll most likely share my sentiments.

The Round Lake Panthers, though short on numbers, made significant strides this season and, with continued growth and hard work, look to be contenders for years to come. A salute to that 3,200 relay team, which finally got its school record last week at sectionals!

Then we have senior Darice Kiefer, who capped off a stellar career by qualifying for state in the 400.

I know I'm forgetting some names, as there are so many. But you know who you are, especially the seniors. I know you'll make as big of an impact wherever you go or whatever your future aspirations hold.

Aikus 12th in state finals

Boys season concludes

BY JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

Junior Cindy Aikus capped off a sparkling season by finishing in 12th place at last weekend's girls track state finals. Aikus posted a personal best jump of 17 feet, two inches in the preliminaries on Friday.

"It was enough to get her into the finals," said head coach Kathy Kelly. "The conditions were ideal the first day but it was a little different the second day-nobody really made any big moves."

It was a first-time appearance to the state finals for Aikus, who is the team's reigning MVP and is expected to garner that award again this week.

"She has performed outstanding for us all season," added Kelly. "She's the first one to make it to the finals in the six or seven years I've been here. Everyone's sure proud of her achievements."

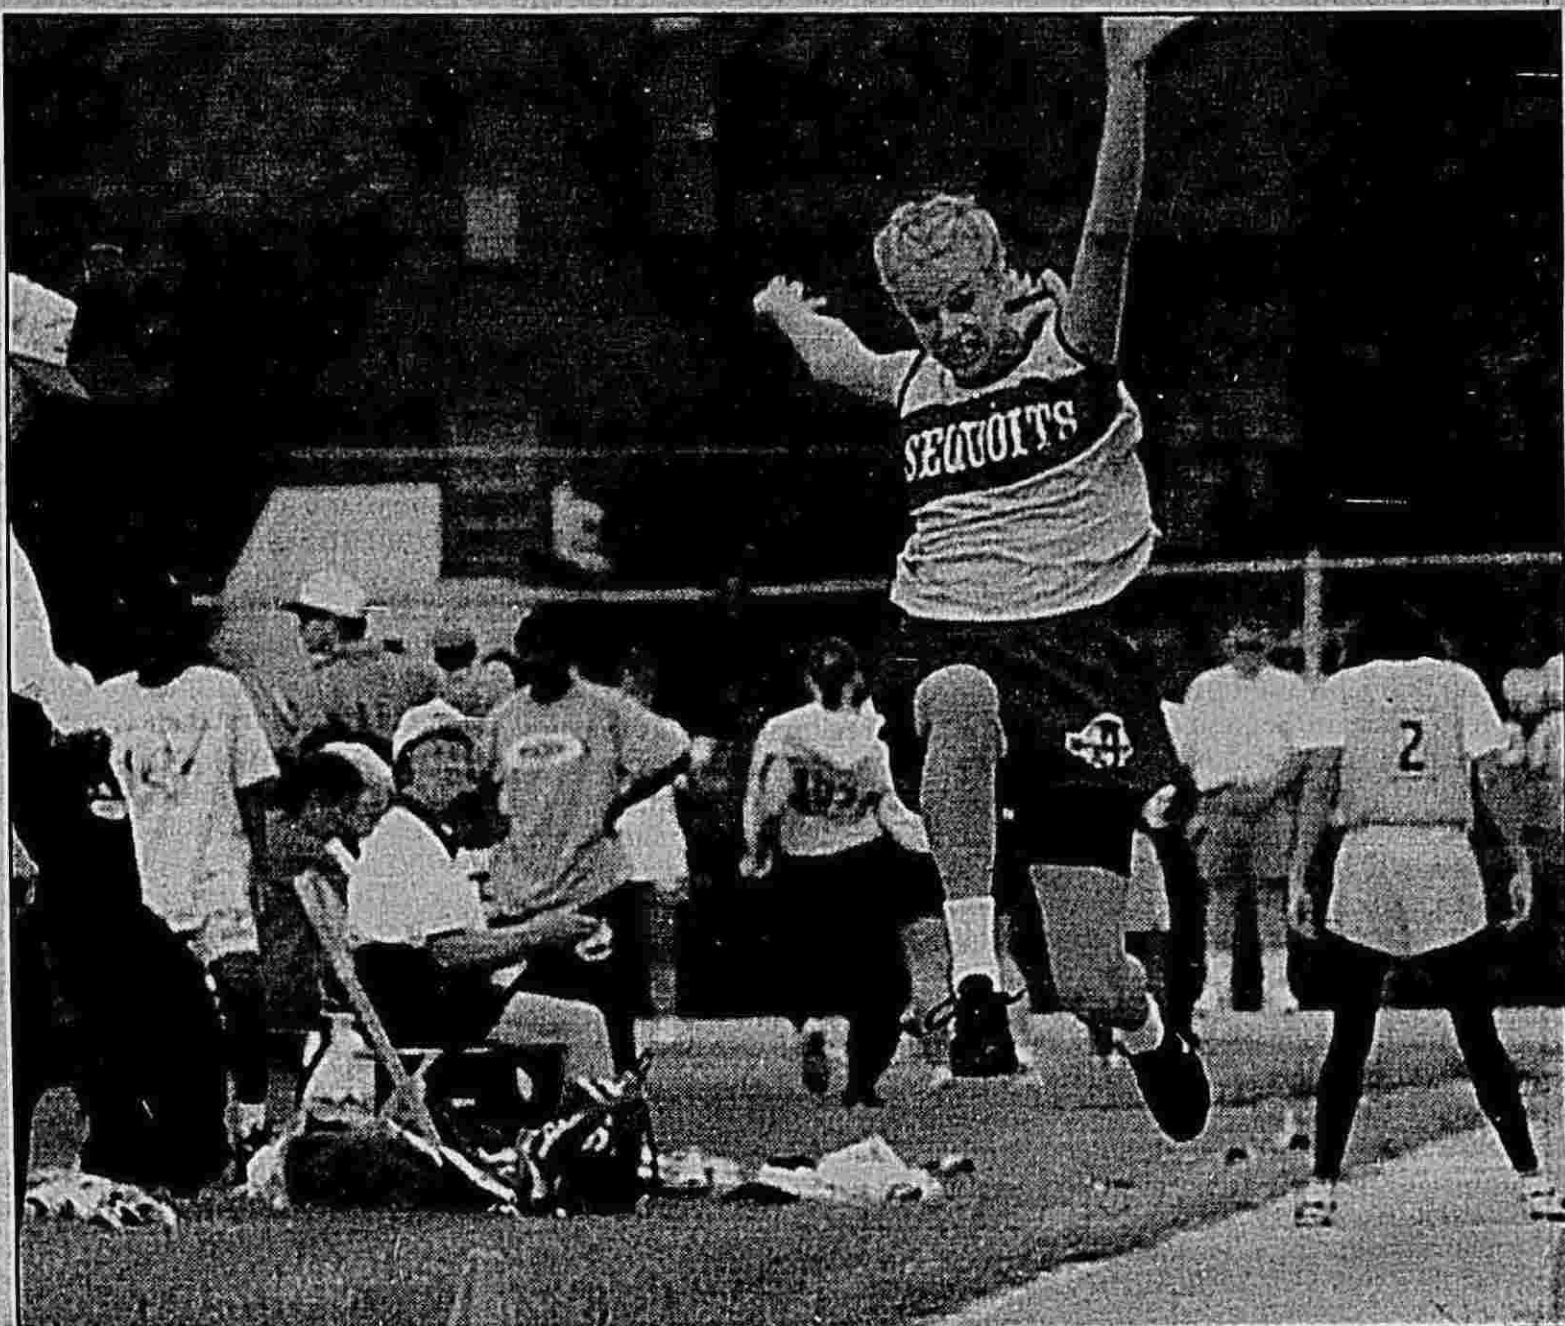

Aikus earned the trip to state following her sectional title at Grayslake the previous week.

Furthermore, she earned all-conference honors and Kelly is sure glad to have her services again next season.

"She's been trying for the school record," she said. "She scores a lot of points for us."

Boys season concludes at Fremd
Meanwhile, the boys varsity track team, which experienced growing pains this season, concluded its campaign last week at the Palatine (Fremd) sectionals.

Senior Joe Dellaria posted a personal best in the mile run, clocking in at 4:53.

Senior Cindy Aikus competes last weekend in the long jump at the state girls track and field finals in Charleston.-Photo by Steve Young.

"That was a nice move by Joe," said head coach Norm Hahn. "He knocked off :28 seconds."

Junior Jim Meyer also topped his personal best by four seconds with a 2:06.1 time in the open 800 run.

Rounding out the PB's for the Sequoits was Rob Lodeski, who jumped 18-8 in the long jump, topping his previous PB of 18-1.

"The weather was terrible (on Friday at Fremd) and took away from some perhaps outstanding performances," added Hahn. "But I was proud of the way our kids hung in there this year. We only lose three seniors, so we should be in pretty good shape next year."

Lady Sequoits advance

BY JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

The Antioch varsity softball team's season took another step forward after its 15-2 victory (five innings) over North Chicago in first-round regional action Monday.

The eighth-seeded Sequoits were never contested, as they banged out 19 hits on the afternoon.

"We pretty much controlled the game," said head coach Steve Wapon. "We did what we had to do."

Offensively, Jamie Knuth was 1 for 1 with a three-run homer, Megs

Kotlarz 2 for 4 with a solo homer, double, four RBIs and two runs scored, Megan Hagglund 1 for 1 with one run scored, and Nicole Astar run scored.

"We played sound defense," added Wapon.

Last weekend, the Sequoits, currently 10-23 on the year, posted a second-place finish in the Antioch Quad.

Antioch prevailed 15-7 over Regina Dominican in first-round action.

Lake County Baseball braces for fight with Navy

After many year of using and improving the fields and facilities at Fort Sheridan, Lake County Baseball was shocked when the Navy informed them that they would have to vacate the property. So what had been a distant threat is now an impending situation. Lake County Baseball is trying to prepare for this situation by looking for new buildings and new ball fields, or even some vacant land to relocate. If anyone knows a place that could accommodate our indoor facility and the not-for-profit baseball program, contact

Lake County Baseball at 945-9606.

However, until that time Lake County Baseball is making good use of the fields in running tournaments at its home fields at Fort Sheridan. This year Lake County Baseball will be hosting tournaments at Fort Sheridan, July 9, 10 and 11 will find Lake County hosting a tournament for 11 year old teams and then the Red, White and Blue tournament for 10 year old teams will take place on July 23, 24, and 25. If you are interested in participating in any of these tournaments to be held at Fort Sheridan, contact Lake County Baseball for more information.

Lake County Baseball is also sponsoring three tournaments at the Fielder's Choice Sports Complex in Racine, Wis. These tournaments are for 11, 12, 13 and 14 year old teams. Wilmot Speedway—Sexton repeats Tommy Sexton of Antioch, wasted little time finding his way to victory lane again as he scored his second straight 25-lap Star Trac Outlaw Winged Sprint feature win on, at Premier Racing Production's Wilmot Speedway. "General Lee" Tibbitts of Hebron, lead the contingent of IMCA modifieds for his first 20-lap main event win of the season. Both main events highlighted Wilmot's Annual "Just Say No To Drugs" Night.

"This car is running great, said Sexton, after kissing his front wing of his car in victory lane. "I knew the start was going to be a little tricky, because it was kind of slick down low in the first turn. I set up high and when Mike Dubs got sideways, I had an opening and was able to get past about three cars. Once I got in front, I knew Dave Hanna and Dave Moulis would both be coming, because they're tough to beat here. I kept working the lapped traffic and it all came together."

Dennis Spitz broke in front of the non-stop spring main. Sexton shot to the outside of turn four on lap three, taking the point. Hanna and D. Moulis moved within striking distance of Sexton during the final five laps, with the top three less than two car lengths apart at the finish. Hanna held off D. Moulis by less than a foot for second. Gary Dye was fourth "B" Main winner Paul Ptasinski fifth.

"That first turn was a little tricky," laughed Tibbitts, referring to a restart when he lost the lead. "It worked in my favor later. This is a great car and I can't be more pleased. There's a lot of good, young drivers out here. They made me work for it."

Tibbitts took the initial lead, with cautions keeping the tempo slow. On the third restart, Tibbitts drifted wide in turn one allowing Rob Olson to slip by on the inside. The caution was brought about when second place Elmer Everman and third place Casey Schramm tangled in turn one on lap 11.

The final caution came on lap 14, with the tables turned. Tibbitts overtook Olson on the inside in turn two. Olson eventually pulled into the infield with motor problems. At the finish it was Tibbitts, the 56-year-old veteran of 38 seasons of racing, the last five on clay, scoring the win ahead several new drivers. Rookie Jim Morrison was second, Chuck Ostergaard third. Schramm, another first year driver, came from the back after the tangle to place fourth and took the division point lead. Rookie Dr. Ken Johnson was fifth.

Wilmot Speedway will host its Memorial Day Festival, featuring Star Trac 410 Outlaw Winged Sprints and IMCA modifieds. Grandstand gates open at 5 p.m. with sprint time trials at 6:30 and racing at 7:30 p.m.

The next Sunday Funday will be on June 6 with Grad Night featuring Coors Light Silver Bullet Cruisers, Rascal Outlaw Sprints and IMCA hobby stocks. On track activity on Sundays begins at 4:30 p.m.

Wilmot Speedway will be participating in two Memorial Day weekend activities on Saturday, May 29. Drivers and cars are expected at the Annual Kenosha Optimists Club "Just Say No" Rally from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. at Carthage College on Sheridan Road on Kenosha's northside lakefront. Drivers are also expected at Lake Villa's Safety Day from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Lake Villa VFW Post parking lot on Grand Avenue, just west of the train station, in downtown Lake Villa.

Lindenhurst Dynamo U-10 boys

The Lindenhurst Dynamo U-10 boys soccer team traveled to Rockford to face the Raptors and found themselves in unfamiliar territory, down by the score of 2-0 at halftime. Dynamo pulled together as a team, turned their hats inside out, and put on their rally caps in the second half. Scott Newman led the way from deep in the right corner and sent a crossover pass into a strong wind where Chris Hittenmiller headed the ball in the net for a picture perfect play.

Down 2-1 Peter Niles sent a booming kick from the defensive zone at the net, after a rebound off the goalkeepers hands, B.J. Paramski single handedly lifted the ball to himself and headed it through the goal to tie the score at two. Dynamo continued their attack when Brett McKenzie attacking down the left sideline centered a pass to Sean Hertz, Hertz trapped the ball and set up a nice pass to Aaron Nichols who one touched the ball in the goal for the third and final goal. This game was a great confidence builder with a come from behind 3 to 2 victory to extend our season record to 6 and 1. Andy Schultz once again did outstanding job in the net making several key saves. Peter Niles, Matthew Reimer and the rest of the Dynamo defense played a great game to seal the victory and totally shut down the Rockford Raptors in the second half.

Difficult holes: #3 (par 4, 454), #7 (par 4, 440), #14 (par 4, 460)

Signature hole: #18 (par 4, 430). This beautiful dogleg right requires a 120-yard carry off the tee through a schutte (of trees). A lake lines the right side of the fairway all the way to a slightly elevated green, with bunkers lining the back side.

Clubhouse amenities: Pine Meadow offers one of the best public practice facilities around (i.e. Practice greens, two chipping greens, two putting greens, four sandtraps, 70 grass mats, and 50 mat tees). Guests/players can also enjoy a full-service bar and snack shop. Lessons are also available.

Price: Pine Meadow offers a standard seven-day rate; $68 (walking); $82 (riding). Caddies are also available and tee-times are accepted 120 days in advance.

Comment: "Pine Meadow is a beautiful, well-manicured course with watered, bent grass fairways. Tees and greens are also bent grass, and the course offers the most scenic ambience, with challenging holes carved through an abundant supply of its namesake, pine trees."—Brolley

Easy holes: #13 (par 3, 339)

Difficult holes: #6 (par 5, 529), #12 (par 3, 184), #21 (par 4, 436). Note: hole #21 is squeezed off by big oaks and requires two long accurate shots.

Signature hole: #6 (par 5, 529). With a good drive, longer players can possibly reach the green in two on this dogleg right. Trouble awaits any errant shots, as the hole is lined with water from tee to green to an undulating green surrounded by two bunkers.

Clubhouse amenities: Full service bar and grille, with lunch served Mon.-Fri. and dinner served in the loft restaurant Mon.-Sat. An 80-room hotel also accommodates this great facility. Breakfast is served in the hotel, where guests can also enjoy a health club, indoor pool, and lighted driving range.

Phone: 360-4730

Par: 72

Holes: 18

Yardage: 6,626

Head P.G.A. Pro: Marv Rezabek

Difficulty: Easy-Moderate

Easy holes: #8 (par 4, 358), #2 (par 4, 358), #13 (par 4, 310).

Difficult holes: #10 (par 4, 430), #15 (par 4, 430), #16 (par 4, 350), #17 (par 3, 165), #18 (par 4, 410).

Signature hole(s): #5 (par 5, 545 back tees, 530 regular tees). A beautiful, dogleg left tree-lined par five which requires accuracy off the tee. After the tee shot, the ideal second shot would be with a mid-iron, leaving the player with another mid-long iron into the green. Hole #17 also makes a strong statement as Bonnie Brook's signature hole. Only a 165-yard par-3, this little gem can produce a score of 5 or 6 at the drop of a hat, with creek lining most of the front and left side of the green and prevailing winds always playing into the equation.

Clubhouse amenities: Bonnie Brook offers a snack bar, open seven days a week, with limited breakfast and lunch items with the feature attraction being the all-you-can-eat fish fry on Friday's. Banquet facilities, outings, and locker room facilities are also available for guests/players to utilize. Players can enjoy a full-service driving range, with lessons also being available.

Price: $28-$33 (Weekday and weekend). Senior rates on Monday and Tuesday. Call three days ahead for reservations.

Pro's comments: "It's an old course with a lot of mature trees and water on about 10 holes. The rough is usually a factor and always in great shape. Watered fairways with bent grass are also a featured attraction. It is not that long of a course and definitely plays tougher than it looks."—Rezabek Clubhouse amenities: "The clubhouse offers a simple menu of sandwiches and burgers, and has a very open atmosphere. There are windows all around—you can see the first tee, the driving range, the putting green and the 10th tee. We even have Mickey Finn's microbrew."—Holmes.

Price: $45-60 (Weekday and weekend)

Pro's comments: "Bittersweet is a very pretty course. We have a 100-year-old sedge meadow, and the course is very natural. We are in cooperation with the Audubon Society, so the course is built around nature. And it's easy to get to—it's just off Grand Avenue."—Holmes

'I don't forget them, and I want them to remember me'

Fostering fulfillment

Foster parenting offers emotional rewards

By KENNETH PATCHEN
Staff Reporter

For Sue Rogers, the joys of foster children fill her day at home and her hours at work. It's a twin feature of her life, and she is ready to tell anyone about it.

"I've been a foster mother since March, 1990," she said. She also works as a Foster Parent Support Specialist for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services in Waukegan.

Rogers lives in Lake Villa.

She loves her life, but she is worried about the need to find more foster parents.

"The rewards (of being a foster parent) are ten times greater than I thought they would be," she said. "You're making a lasting impact on a child."

"There's just constant rewards."

"I'm not special."

"I've got nine kids in my house right now," she said. She is a single parent with nine children and three jobs. It is a joyful voice and a warm picture that she spreads before people who wonder how they can bring children into their lives.

"Children are a hoot. I love being around kids," she said. This includes the world from which they come. For foster children, that world is often troubled and they need help. Rogers welcomes the chance and the challenge to help.

She enjoys being part of a team of professionals who have helped parents get through traumatic events in their lives. Out of her own foster parent experience, she has created an extended family. It enriches her life.

"I don't forget them, and I want them to remember me," Rogers said.

Rogers likes to see children respond to change, help, and consistency. It helps children structure their lives so they receive the proper kinds of nourishment.

She enjoys watching children in DCFS care programs catch up to other kids their age and seeing them thrive.

Rogers can recognize all these positives that foster parenting has brought to her life to enriched it. She also finds that potential parents who love children do not see it as an option for their own lives. To her, it is almost too cavalier the way people assume there is no place for themselves in the lives of children and no place for the foster child in their lives.

Rogers said that there are periods in the lives of people where children can fit right in.

"I'm assisting in trying to find foster homes for kids needing care," she said. That is what her job is at DCFS. She maintains a list of homes where children can be placed on an emergency basis while other professionals work to reunify the family.

Foster parenting is not an alternative method for adoption.

"It's my job to meet with people on a monthly basis and keep (the list) updated."

"I keep tabs on that."

When a child needs protective custody, she knows who she can call. It is a job that also requires her to find places for children.

"That's where I've seen the most frustration—not having the places for the volume of kids who need care."

Candidate foster parents enter a licensing process that includes 30 hours of pre-service training. "I am also a trainer for that program," Rogers said. It is one of her three jobs.

The pre-service training helps potential foster parents understand what they're about to become involved in. The training helps sort out pre-conceived notions. It lets them know what foster parenting means.

"There's not a specific type home," she said. "We're trying to place a child in the most suitable home."

There is home study for foster parents as part of the licensing requirements.

Background checks, health checks, a tuberculosis shot, and inoculations for all pets in the foster parent household are part of this licensing process. The parents need to understand behavior and how to nurture a child.

"Parenting someone else's child is totally different," she said. The pre-service training program tries to communicate some of these complexities.

Recently state laws have changed. The changes effect how long a child may remain in foster care. Professional child care workers now believe that it is important to have children in a permanent situation sooner than was known to be needed in the past.

"If we don't get more homes now, we're not going to be prepared for the number of kids we're going to get," Rogers said.

This is a good time for potential foster parents to make a commitment to themselves to look further.

Rogers said that the mission for DCFS is to make every effort to reunify the biological parent and child. Also, the time period for biological parents to correct the problems that placed their child in foster care is now shorter.

"That's our number one goal."

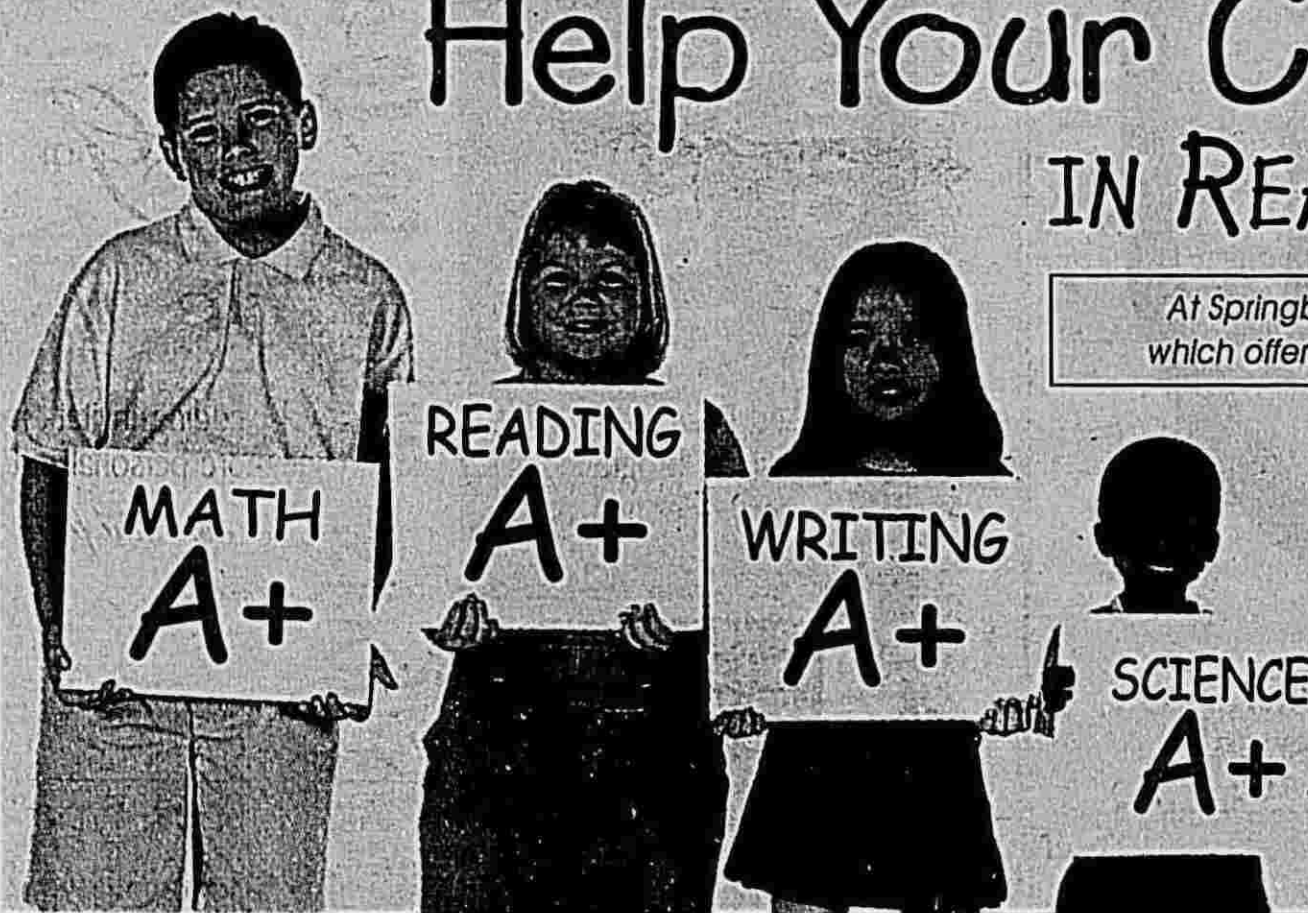

"(Foster parents) should come forward with the intent to help reunify families," Rogers said.

Adoption is a completely different approach. "It should be

FOSTERING: Surrogate parenting creates solid childhoods approached separately."

"It is an area problem," Rogers said of the effort to locate willing foster parents. She also thinks it is a community problem, a community obligation. People need to be sure that children in the community are cared for and to provide the large variety of ways that goal can be fulfilled.

Not every foster parent needs to take in a child. Some folks may wish to offer help by providing respite care. There can be short or long-term help given to other foster parents who need a brake for whatever reason. There are many ways to help out.

Sue Rogers of Lake Villa, who works for the Department of Children and Family Services in Waukegan, plays a card game with some of her foster children at their home. She has been a foster parent since 1990.—Photo by Sandy Bressner

"They can tell us what they can do," said Rogers.

Maybe the parents can consider just taking one child in an emergency situation.

Rogers said that DCFS can be flexible about meeting with people and about working with foster parents.

There are financial stipends to help the foster parents. Rogers said that it is not uncommon for parents to spend more than for what they can be reimbursed. But basically, DCFS offers a room and board reimbursement. For the child, there also is a personal allowance and there is a clothing allowance.

There can be reimbursement for daycare for a parent that is working.

"There is ongoing support," said Rogers.

"Hopefully the monetary issue will not stop you from doing this."

Rogers wants people to consider the foster parent alternative. If it appeals to them, she needs to hear from them. People can get started with a call to her at the Waukegan Field office of DCFS, 847-249-7800. They can ask her for more information on becoming a foster parent.

Beam them up to a galaxy far, far, away

A reader recently asked me where I stand on the issue of Star Trek versus Star Wars.

Initially, I was hesitant to address this issue, for several reasons: 1. I didn't know it WAS an issue. 2. By doing so, I might be setting a dangerous precedent of "reader expectations". Next you will want to know which bathroom tissue I think is softer: Charmin or Northern. 3. No matter which side I take, imagine the kind of mail I could get from science fiction fanatics: "You aren't fit to tighten William Shatner's corset." Or "You'd make a nice concubine for Jabba the Hut."

But after thinking about it, I realized that I couldn't simply ignore a topic with such deep societal impact. After all, there may be a war going on in Yugoslavia, but we have people here in America who actually stood in long lines for hours just to be the first to buy tickets for "Star Wars, Episode One: The Phantom Menace", a movie that WILL BE OUT FOR MONTHS.

If that isn't an indication that this country has problems, I don't know what is. In fact, maybe Al Gore should step aside and let Tipper run for office instead. After all, she strongly believes that we need to do more about mental health problems in this country, and I think she's on to something ("It's the insanity, stupid!")

With those thoughts in mind (or maybe, "out of our minds"), I decided that it were in the best interest of my readers to research this important issue carefully and to scientifically determine which of these two futuristic sagas has made the strongest impact on our culture. In other words, I went to see the new "Star Wars" movie so I could write about it and deduct it on my income tax (Hey-movies aren't cheap, these days!)

Here are the results:

STAR WARS VS. STAR TREK

1. THE "HOKE FACTOR": When it comes to believable plotting, it is safe to say that there is a certain positive "hokiness" about the storylines for both the Star Wars saga and the Star Trek voyages. It is, without a doubt, part of their appeal. However, when it comes to believable acting, there is no question as to who boldly goes where most actors who wish to remain employed never dare to go: Star Trek's Captain Kirk, William "Hokey" Shatner, who wins this category hands down. For him, believable acting is the final frontier. 2. The "Is it Real, or is it Memorex" Effect: We have come a long way from those Flash Gordon serials where the spaceships bobbed along like apples on visible strings. And while Star Trek was a huge improvement, it was George Lucas and his

Star Wars trilogy who truly took us "where no man has gone before". With the new Episode One, he has done it once again (or, as Jar Jar Binks, alien cousin of Elmer Fudd, would say, "How wude!")

3. "G" Wizards: (Gene vs. George): Gene Roddenberry paved the way, and George Lucas upped the stakes. I guess to be a creative genius, it doesn't hurt if your name starts with a "G". This one's a standoff. 4. Pocket Padding (Merchandising): Somehow, William Shatner and the term "action figure" just never hit it off. Star Wars runs far, far away in this category.

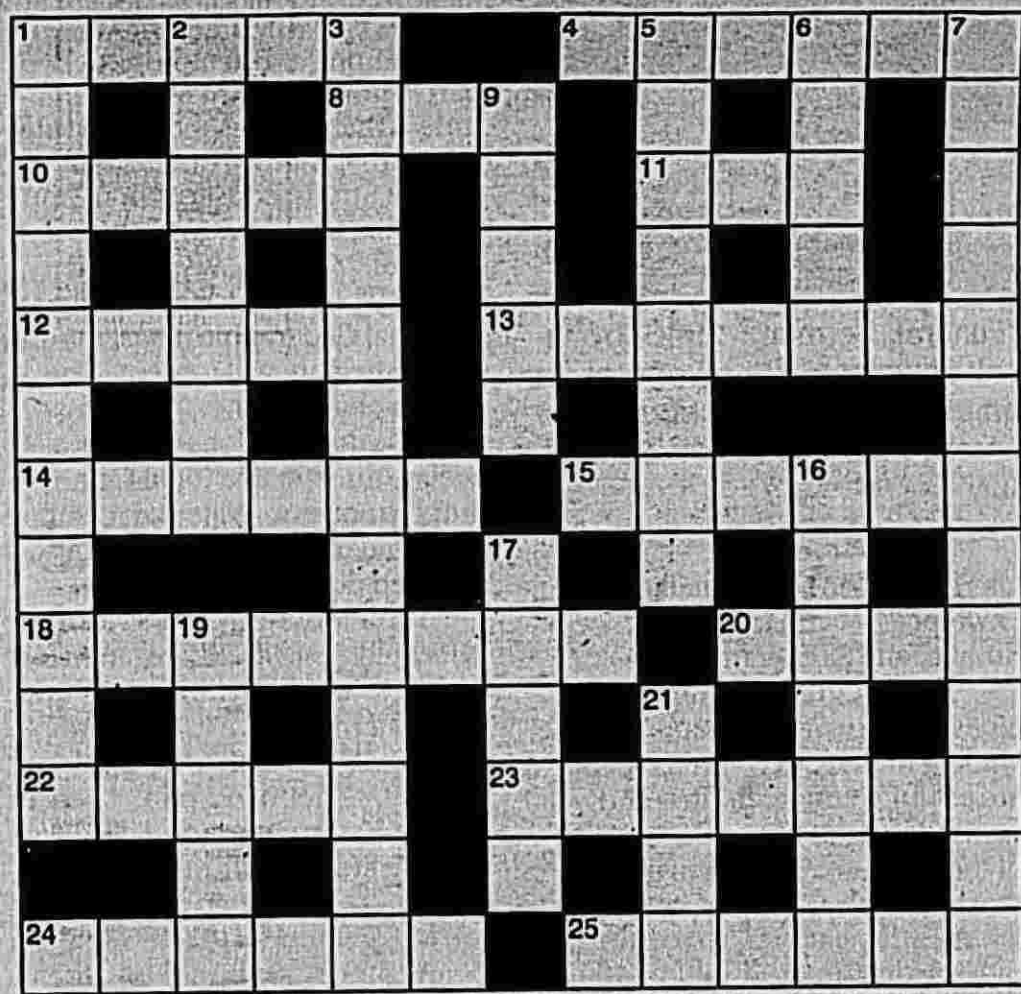

5. The "Virile" Vibe: Refreshingly, neither of these movie series have contained any nude scenes to speak of, at least none of the human variety, anyway. But considering our culture's constantly diminishing standards of good taste, it could happen. So, if it does, who would you rather see naked: 1. The Star Wars Leading Men—Harrison Ford and Mark Hamill, Liam Neeson and Ewan McGregor; or 2. The Star Trek Leading Men—William Shatner & Leonard Nimoy? (I think we all know the answer to this question!)

As you can see, while it was close, a clear winner has emerged to dominate this issue by a score of 3-2. Or, as Jabba the Hutt might say, "Too bad, Trekkies. This time, you're bantha fodder!"

May the force be with me.

Children's Entertainment Train makes first run

Yes, a new train will be riding the rails in June filled with story tellers, costumed characters, special entertainers, and more. The Storyland Express, specially chartered Metra trains, will be stopping at 18 suburban cities on Saturday June 5, June 12, and June 19 on the Rock Island (Joliet), Burlington/Santa Fe (Aurora), and Milwaukee West (Elgin) lines.

Children (ages 2-10) will be wide-eyed as costume characters parade through the Storyland train cars (characters are close enough to touch and talk to.) When not being entertained by storytellers, entertainers, and characters, children will be happily engaged in numerous fun activities including face painting, singing, and more.

This special train will be traveling to the Story Book Village, a real destination, where children will visit with the characters at their homes.

A ride on the Storyland Express Train will be more than just a train ride; it will be an entertainment experience for children ages 2-10 (and their parents, grandparents, and special friends). This train ride is more than just a fun and entertaining experience in a unique atmosphere, it is also designed to be informational, educational, and motivational for your children.

All these activities are designed to keep the children from thinking about what they are going to see at the Storybook Village. Everyone will tour the various scenes from your favorite stories and visit with the characters at their home in the Story Book village.

The Storyland Express Train is organized by Storyland Entertainers, a non profit organization providing special entertainment for children. The organization works closely with METRA and distributes proceeds to children's organizations.

Terra Museum presents masters of color and light

Masters of Color and Light: Homer, Sargent, and the American Watercolor Movement an exhibition of 140 original works chosen from the Brooklyn Museum of Art's renowned permanent collection of nearly 800 watercolors will open at Terra Museum of American Art in Chicago now through Sunday, July 4.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to view rarely seen masterpieces of American art," said John Hallmark Neff, Terra Museum director and curator of collections. "These light-sensitive works will only be shown at Terra Museum for eight weeks before they are returned to storage to conserve them for future generations."

Masters of Color and Light: Homer, Sargent, and American Watercolor Movement provides a unique survey of artistic activity in watercolor from 1777 to the 1980's. The exhibition traces the rise of watercolor from its initial status secondary to oil painting, through the twentieth century when, for a time, critics declared it the "American medium."

Among the early watercolors are works by topographical artists such as George Beck, William Guy Wall, George Harvey and Fanny Palmer. Works after 1870 feature prominent artists such as William T. Richards, Winslow Homer, Thomas Eakins, Thomas Moran, Edwin Austin Abbey and John Sargent. Twentieth century paintings included are by artists such as Georgia O'Keeffe, John Marin, Jacob Lawrence, Stuart Davis, Mark Rothko, and Sam Francis.

"Funeral, Sermon," 1946, by Jacob Lawrence, will be part of an art exhibition, at Terra Museum of American Art through Sunday, July 4.

"In most museums and galleries today, works on paper, including those with colored media, are exhibited under limited and controlled light, due to the fragility of the medium," said Neff, nothing that a special wall will be constructed and other steps taken to protect the paintings in the exhibit.

A fully illustrated catalogue accompanies the exhibit and provides in-depth analysis of the lively and complex history of watercolor in America.

In addition to the exhibition, Terra Museum will offer a wide array of educational programs for visitors of all ages including an initial lecture Friday, May 7, at 5:30 p.m. with Brooklyn Museum of art curator Linda S. Ferber, the Andrew Mellon curator of American art, and Barbara Gallati, curator of American painting and sculpture. A two-part lecture program May 12 and June 1, features, respectively, watercolor artist Gladys Nilsson, and Harriet Stratis, conservator of prints and drawings at the Art Institute of Chicago.

On Thursday, June 24, at 6 p.m., National Geographic magazine and Terra Museum will present "The Geography of Homer," and illustrated lecture by Robert Poole, associate director, National Geographic Society. Watercolor workshop and demonstrations are also planned during the exhibition.

Terra Museum of American Art is located at 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago. Museum hours are Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, 12 noon to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge on Tuesdays and the first Sunday of every month. The museum's general information number is 312-664-3939.

Advance tickets may be purchased online at www.ticketweb.com or by calling 312-726-4849 around the clock.

Filmmaker camp for kids in June

For one week only, June 21-25, 150 movie-loving children, ages 7-13, will take part in workshops developed by industry professionals. Facets' Media Arts Camp is the most unique film camp for kids in America—a 5 day intensive where future filmmakers, screenwriters and budding critics develop skills in film critique while receiving hands-on video production training.

Media Arts Camp participants first view award-winning international films made for children and clips from classics such as Hitchcock's North by Northwest. Screenings are followed by discussions of film technique, reviews before going on to learn specific production skills.

The most exciting aspect of Facets' Media Arts Camp is when the children get a chance to show-off their creative talents in filmmaking, as they collaborate to produce an original short video of their own! Campers have the choice of participation in one of three hands-on production seminars: scriptwriting and storyboarding, acting, and videography. The camp culminates on "production day" when the videographers shoot the scripts written by the scripting group, and performed by the acting group.

On production day, in addition to producing a video based on an original story, children at Media Arts Camp gain experience in three specialized media seminars: public service announcement (PSA) production, where children develop, script, and shoot a PSA; newscast production; where children write and film a mock newscast and commercial analysis, where children discuss the role of commercial media and advertising in their lives.

On the final day of camp, Friday, August 25, parents and friends of Media campers see the world premiere of the films created during Facets' Media Arts Camp. These videos go on to participate in competitive festivals of child-produced films worldwide. The 2 films produced during the 1998 Media Arts Camp recently won an honorable mention and First Prize for "Best Narrative" at the Chicago Youth Film & Video Festival. Leading videographers, media educators, actors, animators and directors form the faculty for Media Arts Camp. Each instructor develops a comprehensive educational curriculum for their sessions, as well as participating in weekly meetings from March through June.

For more information about Facets' Media Arts Camp and the CICCFF, or to set up an interview with camp organizers or attendees, please call Kidsfest at (773) 281-9075.

HOROSCOPE

Aries — March 21/April 20

You have to take control of a business matter early in the week, Aries. Don't be nervous. You can handle the situation. In fact, your superiors are counting on you to take charge. Your efforts will be rewarded. A close friend needs your help with a family matter. Do whatever you can.

Taurus — April 21/May 21

Keep your temper in check when a friend insults your integrity early in the week. You know that you didn't do anything wrong. However, all evidence shows that you did. Calmly explain the situation, and the truth will come out. The person whom you've been seeing asks you an important question. Answer it honestly.

Gemini — May 22/June 21

You have to think quickly when it comes to a personal matter this week, Gemini. Don't let an unexpected situation ruin all that you've worked for recently. You run into an old friend late in the week. Spend time with him or her; you're sure to learn some interesting information.

Cancer — June 22/July 22

You're the center of attention at an outing early in the week. Don't shy away from the spotlight. You deserve all of the praise that you're getting. You should be proud of yourself. A loved one needs your help with a family situation. Do what you can to help. Scorpio plays a key role.

Leo — July 23/August 23

Don't hold a grudge against a good friend who made an honest mistake. He or she never meant to cause you any harm. If you examine the situation, you'll realize this. That special someone needs your advice about a professional matter. Try to be helpful and supportive. Sagittarius plays an important role late in the week.

Virgo — Aug 24/Sept 22

An acquaintance asks to borrow money. Even though you would like to help, say no.

You know the type of person that he or she is — unreliable. You most likely won't get repaid if you lend him or her the cash. The person whom you've been seeing doesn't call. Don't get upset; everything is fine.

Libra — Sept 23/Oct 23

Don't believe everything that you hear this week, Libra. There are a lot of rumors being spread. Try to find out the facts instead of just believing the gossip. It will take some effort, but if you work diligently, you will discover the truth. Gemini plays a key role late in the week.

Scorpio — Oct 24/Nov 22

A close friend needs your assistance with a personal matter. Do what you can to help him or her — even if that means getting involved where you don't belong. He or she truly will appreciate your efforts. A loved one introduces you to an interesting person. Get to know him or her better; it will be worth the effort.

Sagittarius — Nov 23/Dec 21

You run into an old friend early in the week, Sagittarius. As much as you want to spend time with this person, don't. There is a reason why the two of you haven't seen each other in such a long while. The person whom you've been dating asks for your advice. Be honest.

Capricorn — Dec 22/Jan 20

While you would much rather be a leader than a follower, you can't be in charge of a business matter this week, Capricorn. You're not the most qualified person for the job. Just do what you're told. You'll actually learn a lot from this experience. Aquarius plays an important role.

Aquarius — Jan 21/Feb 18

Keep your cool when close friends get into an argument. Try to make them see each other's point of view. It's sure to be a difficult task, but you are more than capable of doing this. These people will listen to what you have to say. A loved one needs a shoulder to cry on. Be there for him or her.

Pisces — Feb 19/March 20

Don't take a relationship with a good friend for granted. Show this person how much you appreciate everything that he or she has done for you. A business associate wants to get to know you better. Think about the consequences before getting involved.

Gurnee heart, vascular center gets accreditation

One of few in nation to offer service

By KORRINA GROM
Staff Reporter

Heart patients in Lake County, if in need of tests with quick results done by an accredited center, need look no further than the Heart and Vascular Center in Gurnee.

The Heart and Vascular Center of Lake County recently became one of 60 such labs in the U.S., Canada, and Puerto Rico to earn accreditation.

According to Dr. Isaac Thomas, medical director, the Gurnee-based center is the only accredited lab in all of Lake County. It is one of only three labs in the Chicago area to receive the honor, along with the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois.

"Typically, the universities will get it first," said Thomas. Universities, Thomas said, have more access to research and technology materials.

"To be a free-standing lab and receive accreditation means a lot," said Thomas.

The accreditation process began one year ago. The center had to meet the high standards of the International Commission for the Accreditation of Echocardiography Laboratories (ICAE). The voluntary process involved the center proving to the ICAL that it could meet the standards of technology, quality studies, and accurate interpretation of cases.

During the process, the center had to show the machines, patient studies, and the set-up of rooms to a panel of experts from the field. In addition, the interpretations of cases had to be accurate in coordination with the interpretations of the panel. The staff members at the center were given all types of cases, with extraordinary pathology.

"We had to look at cases that were more difficult for diagnostic interpretation," said Thomas.

The efforts paid off when the center, located at 1 S. Greenleaf Ave., Suite 1, was awarded accreditation by the ICAL.

While other offices may offer certain amounts of heart and vascular testing, the Gurnee center is the only cardiovascular clinic which offers a multitude of tests. Among the tests offered at the center are electrocardiogram (ECG), treadmill exercise testing for heart assessment, stress echocardiography, pediatric echocardiography, pacemaker checks, and vascular studies.

Unlike hospitals, patients who visit the center usually have results of most tests prior to leaving the office.

"We're not as intimidating as a hospital," said Debby Gilliam, nurse. "We get the test done without going through lengthy admission procedures.

"Our patients don't have to sit at home waiting for the results," said Gilliam.

The reason for the quick results, Thomas said, is because there is always a physician in the building. The tests are conducted, and results are usually ready in within a few minutes.

Most of the patient base at the center comes from referrals, Thomas said, because the center is not a primary-care facility. The patients, who are from all over Lake County, come to the center mainly for testing.

The center is the first outpatient center in Lake County to have an electronic charting system. While the paper method is still in-use, electronic charting allows doctors to retrieve information in a matter of minutes. The center has had this capability for over two years. Most hospitals are thinking of having this method as well.

The center also has the capacity to transmit images from the office to anywhere in the country.

"If the physician is in New York, we can send it to New York," said Thomas. "We maintain patient confidentiality, so it doesn't go through the Internet."

The center, which has been in operation since January of 1996, also has a multi-purpose room which accommodates conferences for physicians, staff, and patients. Thomas said there are satellite connections which allow the center to have live conferences with other physicians.

A main purpose of the multimedia room is to educate patients and groups about modifying risk factors involving high cholesterol, arteriosclerosis, and various heart and vascular-oriented diseases.

Patients are the most important aspect of the facility. The center has a "Caring with technology" motto which affects how patients are treated.

"Our main focus is our patient," said Gilliam. "We offer individual care. We call it high tech, high touch."

The patient-focused attitude can be seen even on the center's "crash carts." Thomas keeps a blood clot dissolving medicine, called the "clot-buster," on the crash cart.

"If a patient were to have a heart attack while they were here, we could start treatment right away," said Gilliam.

"It's important for the community to know there's a facility like this at their doorstep," said Gilliam.

Weekenders Clothing Company volunteers and raises $2,500

Weekenders USA, Inc. a direct sales women's clothing company based in Vernon Hills, volunteered and raised more than $2,500 at the Y-Me® Race Against Breast Cancer held on Mother's Day, May 9 in Chicago's Grant Park.

Several Weekenders Independent Fashion Coordinators and Sales Managers living in the area raised $1,832 for the Y-Me® National Breast Cancer Organization, by offering Weekenders' custom-designed "Wings of Hope" pins for $3 each at their Midway Tent at Sunday's Race.

In addition, 12 Weekenders Staff members raised $725 in pledges when they joined 20,000 participants at Y-Me® Eighth Annual Against Breast Cancer, which entailed a two-mile walk or five-kilometer run. The combined effort from Weekenders Staff and sales-force resulted in a $2,500 Y-Me® donation.

"The most impressive part of the race was realizing the support friends and family give when they know someone who has had breast cancer," said Arlene Carpenter, Weekenders Independent Senior Executive Sales Manager. "One woman didn't have any money with her, so she left to search for a cash machine. She came back later with money in just to buy a pin. It was overwhelming to see this kind of willingness to support Y-Me."

Said Weekenders USA President Rosemary Redmond of the company's partnership efforts for Y-Me®, "As a women's clothing company, supporting Y-Me is a natural marriage for Weekenders, complementing our core philosophy of women helping women. Our purpose in participating in the race was to raise funds for Y-Me and to also come together as a company to give moral support to breast cancer patients, survivors, and their loved ones."

Weekenders USA, Inc.'s direct sales approach offers women opportunities to establish independent direct sales businesses. Through in-home presentations, Independent Fashion Coordinators showcase its clothing line and present a mix-and-match wardrobe concept. The pieces are designed in Canada, manufactured in a company-owned plant in North Carolina, and distributed from the Vernon Hills headquarters. Fashions are also available in Canada, the United Kingdom, Germany, Australia, Chile and Argentina.

For more information on Weekenders Y-Me® partnership or to purchase a Wings of Hope pin, call customer service at 229-1200.

For more information on Y-Me® National Breast Cancer Organization, contact Amy Harris at 312-294-8534, or call Y-Me's® toll-free hotline at 800-221-214.

Weekenders staff members and their families visit the Midway Tent before walking in the Y-Me® Race Against Breast Cancer in Chicago's Grant Park.

A mom's camp dilemma

Dr. Sherri,

I hope you don't mind the informality, but that is how we refer to you in our home. My question involves summer camp. My son is 10 and wants to go away to overnight camp. I'm against this idea and wonder if you believe that a certain age group is good for that. I don't want to be unpopular with my son, but I also have a lot of reservations about him going away for that period of time but I don't want to stunt him socially. D.D.

D.D.,

First, no problem about the informality. A lot of people call me that and I don't mind at all! Regarding camp, my major problem here is that I don't know how your son behaves. I think the decision to send a child to overnight camp is more about behavior and decision-making than age.

Obviously you want to make sure the child is old enough to fend for himself, but maturity plays more of a role. If your son is very immature, overnight camp may not be the right option. However, if he is very mature and a good decision-maker, it might not be so bad. I hate to be so vague, but the reality here is that you ultimately have to make the decision as to whether your son is really appropriate for going away. Let me say, though, that being popular with your child should be the last reason you allow him to go. Parents make many decisions for their children that are very unpopular with their children. Many times, the decisions are still good even though the child does not agree with them. As kids, we don't always know what is good for us.

Another issue that would be important regarding overnight camp is the type of supervision that would be available there. If it is a familiar place that many of your friends have sent their kids, then it might be more comforting to you than if you have never had any information about it before. Let's face it! Unfortunately this is a scary world and there are many scary people in it. Parenting involves the need to sift out those situations that could be either too unsupervised or outright dangerous.

PARENT'S PLACE

There are many great camps out there, both overnight and day camps. If you are not comfortable with overnight camp, then you need to go with your gut feeling. Maybe day camp can work better and make everyone comfortable. Regardless of where you send your child, make sure that ahead of time, you thoroughly check it out to be sure that everyone is comfortable with the surroundings and the staff.

You should also know that I never went to overnight camp and turned out just fine and well adjusted! Day camp was plenty and worked well. It may for you too!

School-age kids with a grown-up disease?

Statistics of children with Type 2 diabetes soar; a condition previously thought to be found only in adults

People sometimes joke about today's kids - dining on fast food and demonstrating the habits of a 'coach potato.' But health professionals have noted a trend that is quickly eliminating the humorous aspect of these lifestyle habits. Diagnosis of type 2 diabetes in children (also known as "adult-onset" diabetes) under the age of 18 has increased tenfold in the past 10 years.

Until recently, type 2 diabetes was mainly diagnosed in people over the age of 40. The increase in children under 18 developing this condition will result in health problems in the future if these patients are not properly managed.

The consequences of developing type 2 diabetes earlier in life are numerous. When adults develop the disease in their 40s, 50s or 60s, there is a shorter period of time in which the condition can do damage. Type 2 diabetes is a disease which, left untreated, can threaten blood pressure, heart function, vision and circulation. Thus, children who develop the disease and do not properly manage the condition face a much graver threat.

What's contributing to this trend? Professionals point to an epidemic of obesity in children, fueled by poor nutrition and a lack of exercise. In addition, a family history of type 2 diabetes is also a contributing factor. Children who represent minority populations (African Americans, Native Americans, Hispanics) are also at a greater risk of developing the disease. Treatment options for children with type 2 diabetes are similar to management in adults. Type 2 diabetes can sometimes be controlled with diet and exercise. When diet and exercise do not have the desired effect, oral medication can be added to the management program.

In recognition of this trend and in an effort to establish a standard treatment protocol, a study is currently underway to examine the benefits of prescribing the same treatment option to children that is used by a large number of adults with type 2 diabetes. Parents can find out how to enroll their children in this study by calling the toll-free number 1-888-99-STUDY.

Parents can help reduce their child's risk of type 2 diabetes by taking simple lifestyle steps. These include:

- Proper nutrition. Parents should provide children with sensible portions of low-fat foods and significant amounts of fresh fruits and vegetables. Parents should also reduce the number of fast-food meals, which typically are extremely high in fat content and low in farm-fresh ingredients.

- Increase exercise. Parents should help their kids to get off the couch and open the screen door. Kids should be encouraged to discover the joys of biking, walking, dancing and swimming, among other exercise options.

- Be a positive role model. Parents who are lifestyle role models also help to successfully motivate their children. "Like father, like son" is an old adage based on the legitimate observation that children do follow in the footsteps of their parents.

- If, despite the above tactics, type 2 diabetes develops, medical treatment is a must.

Antioch resident joins surgery center team

Sandi Littner of Antioch has been named Administrative Services Manager for the new Victory Surgery and Treatment Center scheduled to open soon in Lindenhurst. Littner, who will celebrate 25 years of service with the Victory organization this May, has spent the last year assisting in the development of the new healthcare facility that will serve residents of western Lake County and southern Kenosha County.

In the newly created position of Administrative Services Manager, Littner's goals are to establish and maintain standards that meet patient, physician, staff and corporate needs and to assist in establishing the Victory Surgery and Treatment Center as the preferred provider of such services in western Lake County.

She has responsibility for maintaining corporate standards for all centralized business functions and systems at the surgery and treatment center. She will also serve as a liaison between the center and Victory Memorial Hospital's business offices, MIS and human resources departments. The facility's clerical and reception staff will report to Littner.

A Waukegan native, Littner and her husband currently live in Antioch. An active community member, Littner's volunteer activities include involvement with the Lake County Children's Advocacy Center through MECCA, the clinic established at Victory Hospital for the medical examination and treatment of young victims of sexual abuse.

The Victory Surgery and Treatment Center, 1050 Red Oak Lane, Lindenhurst, is scheduled to open this June. It will provide local access to a wide range of surgical, diagnostic and rehabilitation procedures to the residents of western Lake County.

Condell Medical Center volunteers receive awards for donation of hours

Condell Medical Center recently honored more than 285 volunteers for their donation of 49,632 hours of service at the thirty-fourth annual awards ceremony and luncheon at the Country Squire Restaurant in Grayslake.

Lyn Weber, director of Volunteer Services, said the volunteers work in up to 64 varied areas of the medical center's 801 S. Milwaukee Ave. campus and also at its affiliated Acute Care Centers, Day Center for Intergenerational Care, and Centre Club.

In addition to the surprise announcements of the winner of the Fred MacKenzie Award, a perpetuating award which represents the spirit of voluntarism, and the 1997 Volunteer of the Year Award, volunteers from throughout Lake County also received special service awards.

Mary Ann Forch of Mundelein received the Volunteer of the Year Award, which honors a volunteer who has donated five or more years of exemplary service. She also received a 1000-Hour Award. Forch, a volunteer for three years, has already donated more than 1500 hours of service to Condell. As a volunteer in the Surgical Suite Waiting room, Forch arrives two days a week at 6 a.m. to begin her duties, and every Thursday afternoon, she runs the cash register for Condell's Senior Dinners.

Pat West of Hainesville, not only received a 7000-Hour Award for her service, but she was named the Fred MacKenzie Award winner. This award is given to an outstanding volunteer with at least five years of volunteer service. West began volunteering for Condell in 1976. Currently, she serves in the Patient Discharge program, delivers flowers and sells newspapers to the patients; assists with patient bingo; conducts children's tours; works in public relations; takes tea cart to new mothers and their visitors in The Life Maternity Center; and assists in delivering menus to patients.

Other volunteers received special recognition for their outstanding contribution of service hours to Condell Medical Center. Marion Potter of Grayslake received the 13,000-Hour Award; Dolly Bye of Arkansas, formerly of Grayslake, and Barbara Subject, Grayslake, the 8000-Hour Award; Margaret Lahey of Libertyville, and Edward Martinek, Vernon Hills, received 5000-Hour Awards; and Mae Backovitch, Grayslake and William Foley and Mary Hoch, both of Libertyville, all received 3,000-Hour Awards.

Recipients of the 2000-Hour Award were Joyce Bond, Corry Grevers, and Richard "Rick" Simonsen, all of Libertyville; Jennie Marler of Waukegan; and George Schlung, Hainesville. One Thousand-Hour Awards were presented to Stacie Ford, Helen Mouzakiotis, and Berniece "Bonnie" Nelson, all of Mundelein; Richard Jakaitis, Grayslake; Lorrie Kerwin, Libertyville; and Nancy Schick, Lake Forest.

Volunteers receiving the 500-Hour Award were Janis Adams, Melva Shepherd, and Lorraine Lindstedt, all of Gurnee; Jeanne Bertaud, Mary Ann DuFour, Gerry Herr, Nardina Kinnett, Eva Nuccio and Madeleine Warner, all of Libertyville; and Darin Metzger and William Reinka both of Vernon Hills.

Dentists advise: Learn why children need fluoride

With seemingly conflicting stories appearing in the media about fluoride, members of the dental community are concerned that parents may be feeling more confused than ever about what is best for their children's teeth.

"The fact is plain and simple - fluoride is very important for the development of healthy teeth," says Arthur J. Nowak, D.M.D., professor of Pediatric Dentistry and Pediatrics at University of Iowa and past president of the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD).

This is the message members of the AAPD will be carrying to parents who are trying to sort through what they're reading and hearing about fluoride. In recent months, pediatric dentists across the country have raised concerns that children who drink bottled water are not getting enough fluoride. Many brands of bottled water do not contain the recommended level of fluoride. At the same time, parents are hearing more about the risk of fluorosis, the lacy white lines that can appear on the surface of teeth when children get too much fluoride.

The stories are not as confusing as they sound. According to the AAPD, the real risk is children not getting enough fluoride. With this in mind, pediatric dentists are educating their patients about the benefits of fluoride and how overexposure can be avoided.

Fluoride is Important for Developing Teeth

Dental researchers have long known that adequate amounts of fluoride in drinking water can prevent approximately 30 to 40 percent of cavities in permanent teeth. Over the past few years, as sales of bottled water have risen, pediatric dentists have begun to express concern that the absence of fluoride in many brands of bottled water could potentially contribute to an increase in cavities among patients.

"Many parents don't realize just how important it is for children to receive fluoridated water. What's more, they don't realize that many brands of bottled water do not contain fluoride," says Dr. Nowak.

The appropriate amount of fluoride is particularly important for infants and toddlers whose baby teeth are erupting. "So, if parents mix formula with bottled water that does not contain fluoride, they are depriving their child of fluoride during a very important time in the development of the teeth," explains Dr. Nowak.

Many pediatric dentists and physicians recommend that parents use filtered tap water to mix formulas. Some water filtration pitchers leave fluoride in the water while removing harmful substances that may be present in the water such as lead. To find out if a water filtration pitcher leaves fluoride in tap water, check the claims that are listed on the packaging or talk to your dentist.

Brita's activated carbon filtration pitcher offers high-quality, great-tasting water and has been tested and verified to remove only a trace amount of fluoride over the life of the filter.

Most dental fluorosis is characterized by lacy white lines on the surface of the teeth. While fluorosis is permanent, it is not harmful to children's health. Also, according to the CDC, 94 percent of all cases are classified as mild or very mild and are only noticeable to a dental professional.

Both the AAPD and the CDC agree that parents should be reminded that fluoridated water remains the most effective method of preventing tooth decay. According to Dr. Nowak, there's a simple solution for getting healthier, great-tasting water with fluoride. "A water filtration pitcher with an activated carbon filter provides water that tastes good but leaves the fluoride in."

About The Brita System

Drawing on more than 30 years of experience in water filtration products, Brita is certified by NSF International, the nation's leading independent test lab for the certification of water filtration products, to remove 99 percent of lead, 98 percent of chlorine and reduce mercury, copper and sediment that can be found in tap water.

Remember to ask your family dentist or health professional about the proper level of fluoride needed for optimal oral health. To find out if your tap water is fluoridated, ask your dentist to check the fluoride level of your primary source of drinking water. For more information about fluoride, call the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD) at 312-337-2169 or, visit the AAPD website at <http://aapd.org>

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Pay attention to the details

Paying attention to simple little things that most men neglect makes a few men rich.

- Henry Ford, Sr.

I'm amused at how well the book, "Don't Sweat the Small Stuff and it's all Small Stuff" has sold. I guess it proves that people buy what they want to believe.

In my opinion, ignoring the details is a sure way to fail in business and life. Success is in taking care of simple little things that others either overlook or are too lazy to do.

Recently in Omaha, Nebraska I was reminded of the importance of paying attention to details. I stayed in a hotel where I'm convinced that every member of the staff read "Don't Sweat the Small Stuff" and were determined to apply what they learned. It took 17 minutes to get checked in and the desk clerk offered no apology for the long wait.

The room was not very clean and was sprayed so full of air freshener that I had to open the window to air out the room. Because the airline misplaced my bag, I called the front desk and took them up on their offer of any needed items. I volunteered to come down and pick up a comb, toothbrush and a razor. No problem, they said, we'll bring those items right up.

Thirty minutes later, a young man showed up with my "coffee." He didn't speak English very well, but I finally made him understand that I didn't need coffee. He gave me a comb and toothbrush and promised to return with a razor. He never came back.

At 9:30 p.m. on the second night of the two-night stay, a family of four walked in my room. They were just as surprised as I was. The hotel folks had given us both the same room. After they left, I hung the "do not disturb" sign, double-locked the door, and attached the security chain.

At this hotel, taking care of details would have ensured quick service, a clean room, privacy and promises kept. I'll go out of my way to avoid this hotel in the future.

It's really simple

Taking care of the details is a simple matter. To grow your business or improve your service, try these quick tips.

- Keep your promises. There are two types of promises businesses make to their customers. The first type is the direct promise. "We'll have a cab at your location in five minutes." "We'll deliver at 1:00 p.m." "It will be ready by noon, Tuesday."

The second type of promise is the implied promise. The food at restaurants will be free from contamination. Hotel rooms will be clean and no one else will have your room key. The suit you sent to the cleaners really will be cleaned and pressed.

Both types of promises are important. And, keeping both types requires constant attention to details.

- Keep your eyes open. Look for ways to manage the details and serve customers more effectively. More than 200 years ago, a printer named Ben Franklin saw that one of his competitors was doing sloppy work

Flag season arrives with flying colors

By GLORIA DAVIS
Lakeland Correspondent

It all started when George Washington asked Betty Ross to stitch up a red and white striped banner highlighted with a star for each of the 13 original colonies in a circle on a field of blue.

No longer do we have to get out our sewing basket like Ms. Ross did, for the American Flag can be bought at many local retail outlets or from companies who specialize in the sale of flags and the installation of poles to fly them from.

Bill Callahan is the owner and operator of Eagle Flag and Banner, located at 214 Siwila Dr. in Grayslake. Callahan has been in the flag sales and installation business for nine years, working out of his home and selling flags and installing poles in front of homes, businesses and organizations by appointment only. Call 223-6655 for that appointment.

Over half of his annual business is done in the next three months. Callahan says that he has seen almost 10% increase in flag sales in the last five years.

According to Gary Robinson of Kosco Flag and Flag Poles in Waukegan, their busiest season is also coming up. The most popular flag Kosco sells is the three-foot by five foot, nylon flag that comes with a wooden pole ready for mounting on a bracket, usually bought for private residents. The cost is $25. Small hand-size flags that people wave during a parade, etc., are also very popular.

For $32 a four-foot by six-foot flag is available, with the 12-foot by 18-foot flags for sale to businesses and organizations for $238.

Robinson says that the flags are made of nylon to be able to resist the elements and he cautions potential flag wavers that only lit flags should be left outside overnight. The flag poles average 20 feet in height, but go all the way up to 50 feet approximately topped with either a brass ball or an American Bald Eagle. The only way to dispose of a flag you no longer want is to take it to your local American Legion or burn it.

According to Rich Laskowski, Jr. of the Ace Hardware located in Round Lake, Round Lake Beach, Mundelein, Libertyville, Gurnee, and in Lakehurst Mall, his managers are getting ready for their biggest flag season starting just before Memorial Day.

Again, three by five and four by six flags are Ace's best sellers, with a sales increase noted in the last few years.

But another size flag now resides in Ace's hall of memories.

A few years ago, the side wall of the Ace in Mundelein drew its share of attention during flag waving season.

"The North Shore Sign Co. had a huge flag that they didn't know what to do with so they gave the Mundelein Ace Hardware Store a Garrison Flag, about 10 feet by 30 feet in size, which we mounted on the side of the building. It soon became a gaper attraction."

"The story goes that one Memorial Day about five years ago, 10 family cars pulled up in front of the flag bearing building. An elderly man wearing a WW II Army uniform got out of one of the cars and marched towards the large flag and got his picture taken in front of it by some of the large crowd of people that stood right out in the middle of Hawley St. with their cameras."

He added that in the years the flag hung on Ace's wall many patriotic organizations such as the American Legion used it for pictures. The sign company has since taken the flag back.

Mortgage rate jump may restrain consumer

Rising mortgage rates, inflation and slowing of real wage gains are beginning to point to an imminent slowdown in consumer spending, said Diane C. Swonk, deputy chief economist at The First National Bank of Chicago, a subsidiary of BANK ONE CORPORATION.

Swonk said the rise in mortgage rates will likely boost savings significantly and constrain consumer spending once the payoffs associated with the recent refinancing boom play out.

"Until recently, virtually everything was going the way the consumer: mortgage rates were falling, inflation was decelerating while wages accelerated, and purchasing power was improving," said Swonk. "It is no surprise that consumer spending accelerated rapidly, but now the tides have shifted."

Over the last year, mortgage restructuring generated almost $60 billion in available funds for consumers to spend - about $50 billion cash taken out, and more than $8 billion in reduced interest expense. Only a small portion was included in the circulation of income, and the remainder showed up as a combination of increased spending and investment, suppressing the reported rate at which consumers save, Swonk said.

The Bank One economics department also expanded and revised its coverage of regional economic activity through its proprietary series of indices measuring the total output of goods and services within key states in four regions of the country.

For the Great Lakes area (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin), Swonk said the stage is set for a temporary slowdown as a return to more seasonal weather takes a toll on construction. Light vehicle production is also scheduled to slow temporarily. However, tight labor markets and a record level of retirements remain the primary constraint on growth.

Solid job pattern painted for county

A steady hiring pace is projected for the Lake County area this summer, according to the results of Manpower Inc.'s Third Quarter Employment Outlook Survey for July, August and September.

"After polling local employers," Charles Bartels of Manpower said, "our survey found 24% are preparing to add personnel, none foresee workforce reductions and 69% will maintain existing levels. The balance, 7% have not finalized their plans."

Conditions were milder last summer when 26% indicated they would increase their staffs, while 16% anticipated fewer on their payrolls. Three months ago employers were more bullish, as 33% intended to recruit and none predicted cutbacks were in order. Bartels added that historically employers staff up in the third quarter.

Job seeker are most likely to find opportunities this summer in construction, durable and non-durable goods manufacturing, wholesale/retail trade and services.

On a national basis, changes in staffing beyond seasonal variations are almost imperceptible over the past nine quarters, as 32% of over 15,000 interviewees said they would increase employment in the coming quarter, while 6% intended to decrease, 58% foresee no change and 4% remain uncertain.

College benefits

Accepting the College of Lake County Benefactor Award is Bob Worobow, vice president of Trustmark Insurance, Human Resources, Lake Forest, from CLC president Dr. Gretchen Naff. Benefactors make gifts of $100,000 or more to the CLC foundation.

Mover honored for service

The customer comes first at Koldon Moving & Storage, Inc., of Lake Zurich, just ask the families and companies who used them. North American Van Lines surveyed Koldon Moving & Storage's customers, and as the result, the van lines has honored the agency with the Customer Quality Achiever Award for superior agent performance in customer satisfaction.

"North American measures our performance in a lot of areas, but certainly on of the most important measurements is whether a customer would choose us again," says R.J. Koldon, President. "Our goal is to be the best van lines in the world."

"We at North American take customer satisfaction measurements very seriously, to the point of using an independent research firm to ensure accuracy," says Jim Lahey, Vice President, Total Quality & Customer Value for North American. "It's a quantifiable fact that Koldon Moving & Storage, Inc. consistently delivers superior customer service."

Repurchase plan Ok'd at Success

The board of directors of Success Bancshares, Inc., the holding company for Success National Bank, Lincolnshire, has approved a Stock Repurchase Program enabling the Company to repurchase up to $2,000,000 of the company's common stock from time to time, in the open market or in a private transactions subject to market conditions. the stock repurchase program is authorized until December 31, 2000. "In authorizing this stock repurchase program the management and directors of the company are demonstrating their confidence in the underlying strength of the Company," said Bill Meinen, Success Bancshares, Inc. President and CEO. "We view this program as an opportunity to enhance shareholder value."

COUNTY DIGEST

CLC signs dual admission agreement with UW Parkside

The College of Lake County and the University of Wisconsin-Parkside signed a dual admissions agreement on May 17 which allows CLC students planning to complete baccalaureate degrees at UW Parkside to enroll simultaneously at both schools.

The agreement was signed by CLC President Gretchen Naff and UW Parkside Chancellor Dr. Jack Keating. Under the agreement, CLC students must meet the admission requirements of both institutions for concurrent admission to both CLC and UW-Parkside.

CLC has dual admission agreements with three other four-year institutions: Roosevelt, Northeastern and Northern Illinois universities.

County gets new Planning director

By JOHN ROSZKOWSKI
City Editor

After several months of searching, Lake County has found a new leader for the county's Planning and Development Department.

The board voted unanimously to appoint Phillip J. Rovang of Westminster, Md., as director of Planning and Development at a special meeting this week.

Rovang was selected following a nationwide search of more than 60 applicants. After an initial screening process, interviews were conducted with five candidates and Rovang was chosen.

Rovang, 53, was born and raised in the Midwest and he looks forward to returning to the region.

"I hope that I can help the County Board with their growth management and environmental concerns," said Rovang. "Having looked at the projected population increases for Lake County in the next 20 years, I consider this position to be a real challenge. And I look forward to working with municipalities within Lake County to help guide growth in the most appropriate locations."

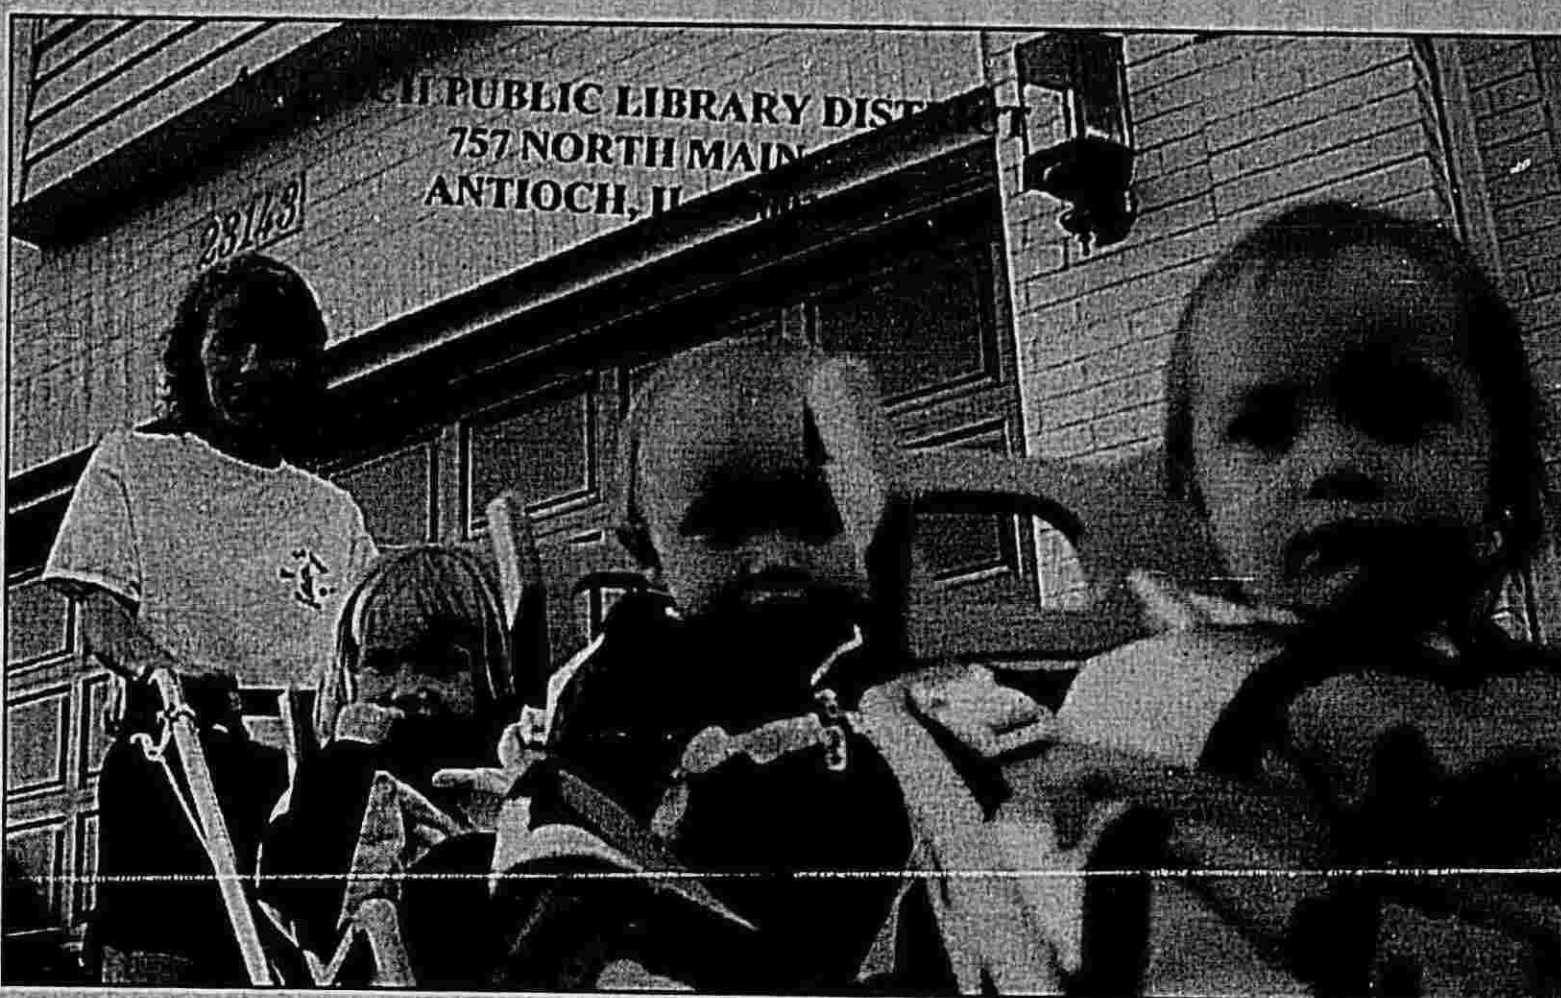

Rovang takes over a department that has been without a leader since January when Barry Hokanson left the department as part of a mutual agreement with the county.

Rovang will begin his new responsibilities in Lake County on June 21, although he was in town this week to meet with county and department officials about the new position. His salary will be $102,000.

"Philip Rovang was highly rated by all of those who participated in the selection," said Board Chairman Jim

Going the extra miles

Kildeer mom runs 100 miles for MS

By LESLIE PIOTROWSKI
Staff Reporter

Long distance runner Geri Sorenson thrives on unusual challenges. The Kildeer resident ran one marathon (26.2 miles) while she was more than seven months pregnant. She ran another, and broke her own record, pushing her three children, two infants and a three-year-old, in a triple baby jogger.

Now she is about to embark on her greatest challenge yet. She will participate in a 100-mile ultramarathon June 4 and 5 in Wisconsin's Kettle Moraine forest preserve. But this time she's not just running for herself, but to raise $100,000 for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

"I have several close friends who live with multiple sclerosis," said Sorenson. "I'm trying to draw attention to a disease most people don't think about or understand."

MS is a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system that generally strikes people between the ages of 20 and 40. Symptoms include numbness, extreme fatigue, muscle aches, optic neuritis, and cognitive and ambulatory disabilities. Although there are therapies for the disease, there is no cure.

It's hard to imagine how Sorenson, who works full-time, can prepare for a 100-mile race, simultaneously raise $100,000 and care for three children.

"People have said that energy is not something I'm lacking," she said.

She is looking forward to the upcoming race, which she expects to complete within 24 hours. She describes the course as rigorous, but also gorgeous.

"I would love to run it with my baby jogger but it's a rocky trail," she said. "There are 166 hills. It's a wooded, shaded trail."

Running for 24 hours requires extensive advance preparation. She has already planned what she will eat and drink to consume 10,000 calories during the race. Her menu includes six cans of soup, 14 peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, eight bananas, 10 peaches, 10 potatoes, four pieces of pizza, and an assortment of cookies and pretzels. She will carry her food in a pack and fill up on water at designated aid stations every six miles.

"It's easy to eat while running," she said.

Because she'll be running part of the course at night, she will wear a head lamp and carry a flashlight.

"The most difficult part will be staying awake," she said. "I'll have to keep thinking about pulling my feet up and not stumbling. But I will focus on all the people with MS and how I'm helping them. That will truly lift me up and carry me through each mile."

Sorenson maintains that the key to her endurance is having a positive attitude. While recently running a 50-mile race, Sorenson noticed that the people who dropped out were those who didn't keep a positive frame of mind.

"It's more important to be mentally psyched up than physically

County may need second jail facility

By JOHN ROSZKOWSKI
City Editor

Lake County is quickly running out of space to house inmates, and a new jail facility will be needed to avoid overcrowding.

That was the conclusion Mark Goldman, a consultant from the National Institute of Corrections, reached during a recent tour of the Lake County Jail.

"Basically, his conclusion is we could use a new jail facility, probably within a two-year period," said Lake County Sheriff Gary Del Re, who agrees a second jail facility will be needed in the not-too-distant future.

The current jail, which was built in 1989, is capable of housing 587 inmates. Although the jail hasn't yet been experiencing overcrowding, Del Re said with the expected inmate growth there could be a problem within two years.

"Currently, it's manageable, but we don't have any additional floor space we can use up," said Del Re.

Del Re said he believes the best alternative is to look at construction of a second facility near the main jail in Waukegan. He expects the second facility would be able to handle between 400 and 500 inmates and cost an estimated $14 million.

Exactly how a new jail would be paid for is unclear. One funding option the County Board has discussed is to use a portion of a proposed 1/4 percent sales tax for jail construction purposes. However, that is an issue that has not been decided by the County Board and any proposed county tax would require voter approval in a referendum.

"The recommendation from the study is (a second facility) in two years, but there's a lot of work that needs to be done before that," according to Del Re.

Del Re said corrections isn't the only area of the criminal justice system that is under stress. He said there is also a need for more courtrooms to handle the increased caseload, additional help in the state's attorney's office and more police officers.

"It's not only the jail that's under stress. All sectors of the criminal justice system are under stress. We want to take a look at all needs," said Del Re.

psychied up," she said.

To prepare, Sorenson is taking long runs on the weekends. She starts at 4 a.m., before her children wake, and runs for six or seven hours every Saturday and Sunday.

She has been running ever since grade school.

"When I was still too young to compete, I saw a group of people on a track team jumping hurdles, and I thought, 'I can do that,'" she said.

Her athletic skills earned her a number of awards in high school and college. She is most proud of participating on a team that won third place in a European competition in 1995.

Her husband, who is also a runner, has been quite supportive. In the past, they have run races together, but Sorenson said he has no intention of ever running another marathon.

Sorenson thinks raising $100,000 is more challenging than running all those miles. Thus far she has sent mailings to everyone she knows and the contributions are growing. She hopes that her commitment to her cause will help inspire others.

Those interested in supporting her can send a check made out to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and send it to Geri Sorenson, 23143 Providence Drive, Kildeer, IL 60047. Supporters can also call 1-800-290-6337 or E-mail: www.gerirunforms.com.

Marina faces stormy waters

Electric Harbor surrounded by neighbor complaints

By JOHN ROSZKOWSKI
City Editor

In recent months, Larry Phillips' marina and bar business in unincorporated Lake Villa has been in the eye of a storm.

Although the business has been at the same location for almost 20 years, some neighbors who live near the Electric Harbor Marina along the eastern shores of Columbia Bay on Fox Lake are now complaining.

They are upset about what they believe is an encroachment of their rights to live in peace and serenity and enjoy their surroundings. They are particular upset the bar started holding weekend bands last summer, which they say disrupted the whole neighborhood.

Phillips said he can't understand what all the fuss is about. He said he opened his business back in 1979 and said it has never been cited for anything by either the Lake County Sheriff's Department or county Health Department.

He believes "false accusations" are hurting the business he has worked so hard to build.

"I've been here for 19 years. We've got one of the nicest, cleanest places around," said Phillips.

But some neighbors paint a different picture.

Robert Glueckert bought a 6,000-square-foot vintage lakefront house near the Electric Harbor marina about 13 years ago.

Glueckert said when he originally moved to the area, the marina just had a small bar and did not bother the neighbors.

However, over the years, Glueckert said the business has grown outside of what was ever intended for a residential area. He said there are now jet ski rentals and powerboat rides at the marina and a small hotel for visitors.

The last straw for neighbors, Glueckert said, came last year. The business added an outdoor gazebo bar and started holding musical events, which Glueckert refers to as "rock concerts," on Saturdays and Sundays.

"This is what we will not put up with," he said. "We've had enough."

Glueckert and residents are also upset about a pier Phillips uses to moor boats, which they say extends 300 feet and into residential property that Phillips rents. He added the business has "nowhere near the parking for the activities planned," and as a result, many of patrons have to park along the street.

Because of these problems, Glueckert said the value of his property and other real estate values in the neighborhood have gone down dramatically. He said he has tried to sell his home but without any luck.

"Everybody comes out and says, 'I don't want to be next to that junk,'" he said.

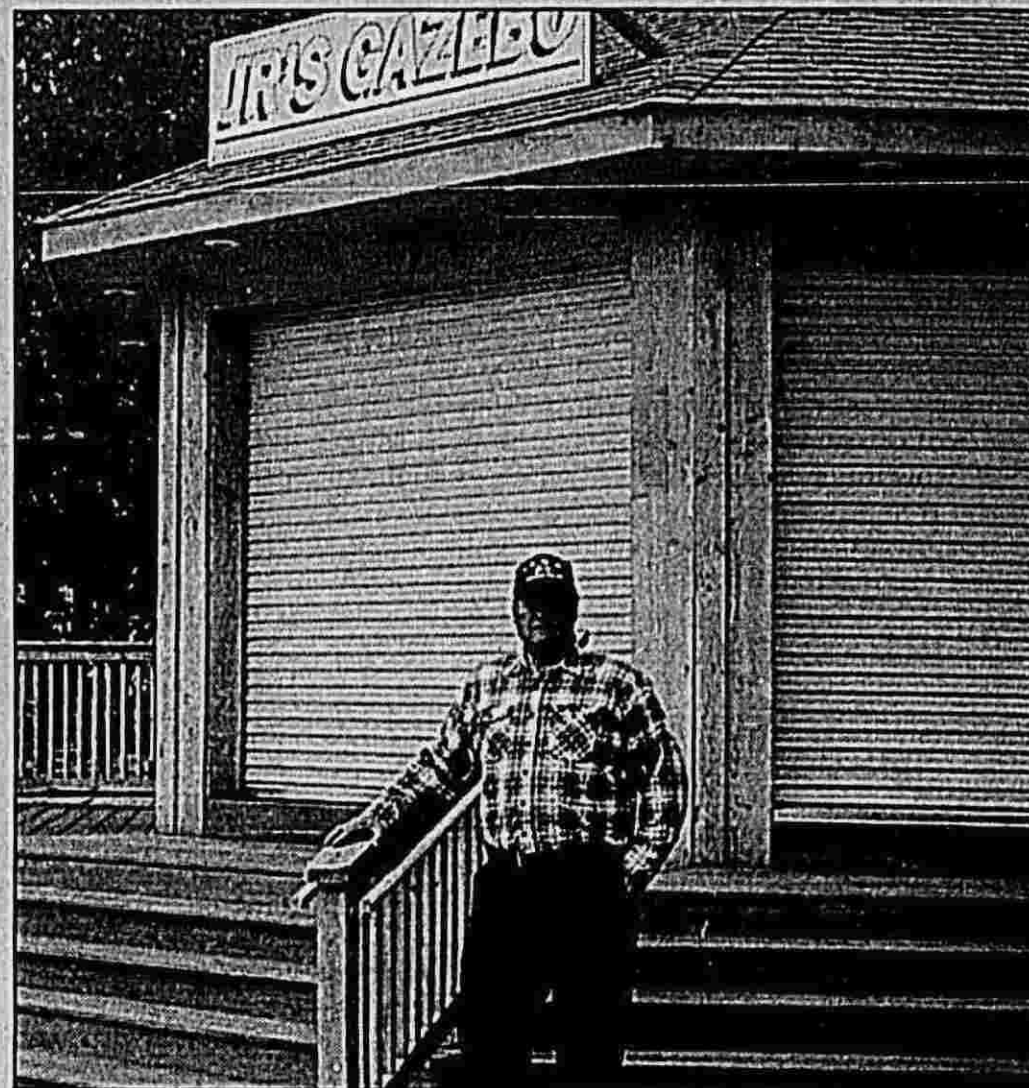

Glueckert and other residents have brought their concerns to the attention of the county Planning and Development Department and the County Board's Planning and Development Committee.

Phillips, meanwhile, believes a few of his neighbors, including Glueckert, and real estate developer Larry Fales, are trying to intentionally put him out of business.

Phillips said Glueckert blames him for the fact he is having problems selling his home. However, he noted Glueckert was well aware the marina was there when he purchased the home.

"He (Glueckert) doesn't feel I should be able to operate anymore. I've been here for 19 years. He just wants me to bow down and close up," said Phillips.

Phillips noted that the noise complaints were without merit. On a few occasions when neighbors complained to police, he said sheriff's deputies came out to the site to investigate and their reports indicate the noise was not excessive.

Phillips further believes Fales has ulterior motives for wanting him out of business. According to Phillips, Fales wants to build a subdivision on property east of the marina across Columbia Bay Road. "Real estate developers tell him if it was an all residential area he would get $5,000 more a home," he said. "He's got this elaborate plan to put me out of business."

Phillips noted that County Board member Judy Martini (R-Antioch) is an independent real estate developer and works out of the same office as Fales. He believes Martini, who has raised concerns about Electric Harbor, has a conflict of interest in the matter.

"The only intent is to put us out

I've been here for 19 years. We've got one of the nicest, cleanest places around.

Larry Phillips,
owner of Electric Harbor Marina

of business by making false accusations," he said.

Phillips said he has hired an attorney, former state legislator Robert Churchill, to provide legal representation in the matter. He hasn't ruled out the possibility of some type of legal action but remains undecided at this point.

"I don't know if I should go (that route) at this time, but these people cost me thousands of dollars in business and hours and hours of time," he said.

Fales believes Phillips is trying to threaten neighbors who have legitimate concerns about the Electric Harbor operation with litigation. He said Phillips sent a letter to him, Columbia Bay Road residents Glueckert and Fred and Nan Hendrich, indicating his intent to file a lawsuit against these individuals in the amount of $100,000 unless these individuals stop their "interference" with the business' activities.

"I think he's basically trying to deny us our constitutional rights to go to public hearings and voice our concerns," said Fales.

Fales said he does have plans to develop a 41-lot subdivision, including building a home for his family, in the neighborhood of the Electric Harbor. However, he denies he is trying to drive Phillips out of business. He said his main concern is the noise created by musical events and that there is insufficient parking by county ordinance for all the business' activities.

"He's got a right to run his business but he's got to comply with the laws on the books today," he said.

Martini, meanwhile, denies having any conflict of interest in the Electric Harbor issue.

"I already talked to the State's Attorney's Office about this issue. He said there is no conflict of interest," Martini said. "I think Mr. Phillips is grasping for straws."

The only reason Martini said she got involved in the matter is because several of the neighbors who lived in the area had complained to her about the noise from the concerts and the number of cars that were driving through the neighborhood.

Larry Leafblad, chairman of the County Board's Planning and Development Committee, said the county is in the process of reviewing special "non-conforming" zoning use classifications as part of the drafting of the county's new unified development ordinance.

He said the county has no intent to single out any specific business.

"We're in the process of changing the unified development ordinance. I know he (Phillips) feels like he's being picked on but he's not being picked on. All we've done is modify special use permits and we're going to do a better job of inspecting special use permits," he said.

Leafblad said there are hundreds of examples where businesses are located in areas which, although they have the required zoning, are in primarily residential neighborhoods. Those businesses include not only bars and restaurants, but home businesses, auto repair shops and gravel and trucking businesses.

The purpose is to ensure these businesses comply with all necessary county regulations to protect the safety and privacy of neighbors, according to Leafblad.

"It's not just Electric Harbor," he said. "It's a very, very widespread problem."

A DIGEST OF STORIES MAKING HEADLINES THROUGHOUT OUR REGION

Teen sentenced for burglaries

Libertyville—A Libertyville teen arrested in connection with a dozen Lake County burglaries faces up to seven years in prison, but could be released within the next year.

Elliot DeCaire, 19, of 1003 Mayfair in Libertyville pleaded guilty early this week, admitting to seven of the crimes and will face jail and probation.

The decision, handed down this week in Lake County Circuit Court, means that if DeCaire completes a boot-camp-style rehabilitation program he could be paroled within the next year.

Upon his release from prison he will serve four years of probation, said Assistant States Attorney Suzanne Fitzgerald. How much time DeCaire serves is up to the department of corrections, she said.

DeCaire was arrested by Northbrook and Libertyville police on Jan. 19.

Skate park safety to be addressed

Grayslake—Questions raised regarding a proposed skate park for Grayslake are tentatively scheduled to come before the village board on June 1.

Village Trustees John MacAulay and Stacy Braverman voiced concern about the safety of the park, which will not have a fence or an attendant.

The village and park district have been looking at the safety concerns for the past several weeks.

"The safety issues will be addressed," said Grayslake Park Commissioner Jane Josephs.

Josephs quoted a list which ranked the annual injuries in basketball, bicycling, football, and baseball all ahead of skateboarding, roller-skating, and in-line skating combined.

Braverman said there is a problem with those statistics because skating is still a lower participation rate than basketball, bicycling, football, and baseball, she said.

"Hit list" just a rumor

Gurnee—Late last week, students brought it to the attention of school officials at the Warren Township High School O'Plaine Road campus that a "hit list" was found in the school. Officials looked into the situation immediately.

"At schools, we get a lot of rumors," said Superintendent Calvin Leader. "With the climate like it is today, we take [the rumors] seriously."

"We don't have a choice to ignore it. We won't ignore it. We're interested in the greatest safety we can provide."

Leader said while many students reported hearing about the "hit list," no students had actually seen it. Officers from the Gurnee Police Department were called to the school for further investigation. No "hit list" was found.

"We have to classify it as a rumor," said Leader.

Police make prostitution arrests

Mundelein—Following an undercover surveillance of a massage parlor in Mundelein, police arrested the owner and two women on prostitution charges.

A Mundelein Police Department investigator conducted surveillance of the Haven Salon massage establishment, located at 358 Townline Road, on May 20. That evening, police arrested Sea Hwa Om, 39, of the 2700 block of Bryn Mawr in Chicago, on a charge of keeping a house of prostitution.

Two female employees, Connie Ostrom, 50, of the 2400 block of Goebbert Road in Arlington Heights, and Poksook Song, 45, of the 1200 block of Algonquin Road in Schaumburg, were arrested on charges of prostitution.

According to Marc Hergott, police investigator, the police department had received a few complaints about the establishment. Police were monitoring the establishment for about a year prior to the arrests.

Home Depot vote on docket

Volo—A plan to bring Home Depot to the village is scheduled for a vote at the village board's June 1 meeting.

The proposal to develop the 100-acre Miller Farm, located on 100 acres stretching east from Route 12 to Nippersink Road, includes 36 acres of commercial property for Home Depot and other stores, and 64 acres of residential for 105 town homes and 384 apartment, said Village President Burnett Russell.

The preliminary plat is up for approval at the meeting. A number of nearby residents who live adjacent to the farm are opposed to the multi-family housing, and prefer the original plan to build a 269-home subdivision.

AL elects first female commander

Round Lake—Kris Siebert of Ingleside has just been elected commander of the Round Lake American Legion. She has the honor of being the first female to hold the position.

The American Legion, which has been in Round Lake for some 51 years, is an organization for those who served in the military during war-time. Siebert was a member of the Women's Army Corps during Vietnam, and worked as a personnel specialist. She is currently employed by the Whistle Stop Cafe in Fox Lake.

Although her new position will keep her busier than ever, Siebert said the satisfaction and camaraderie she feels as a member make it all worthwhile.

"I get along with everyone. We're like family," said Siebert.

"I'm proud to be a member."

Siebert will be officially installed as commander in July.

Students helping students

Fox Lake—A number of Grant Community High School students took time out of their busy schedules this school year to help young children who were having difficulty with reading.

The Grant Reading Corps went into action, with 49 students leaving school during their study hall periods and driving over to Big Hollow, Lotus and Gavin Central schools and working with students in grades 2 to 5.

"They worked on developing the children's reading skills," said Tom Oeffling, faculty sponsor and program facilitator. This helped their reading skills and was a big boost to their self esteem, he said. "They feel better working with the 'big kids.'"

Horse farm may fade away

Wauconda—The Lake County Zoning Board of Appeals has scheduled a hearing to discuss rezoning of a 42-acre parcel with two homes and a horse training and boarding stables into a 22 home subdivision.

The property, located on the south side of Ivanhoe Road, approximately 1,200 feet east of Route 59, in unincorporated Wauconda Township, features an 8-acre lake and almost 9 acres of wetlands on the south edge, said Bob Mosteller, deputy director of Lake County Planning and Development.

The owners are three siblings from Barrington and Palatine whom bought the land 10 years ago, said Todd Lipschutz, a development consultant for the owners who will represent them at the June 9 ZBA hearing, at 1:30 p.m., at Wauconda Township Hall, 505 Bonner Road. "If they build homes themselves or sell lots is yet to be decided," Lipschutz said.

Illinois' oldest W.W.I. veteran dies

Antioch—On Wednesday May 19, 106-year-old Floyd W. Horton passed away at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in North Chicago. Horton was a lifelong Lake County area resident, having lived in Antioch during the latter years of his life.

Once when asked to describe the secret to his lasting health, Horton replied: "I never drank, smoked, or chewed anything. Water is good enough."

In 1917, Horton was drafted into the US Army serving with the 131st Infantry, Company C during WWI. A year later, Horton received his Purple Heart in combat during the Meuse River of the Argonne Forest Offensive in France.

An explosive bullet destroyed the elbow of Horton's right arm, and he was subsequently discharged on September 4, 1920. He was the oldest known WWI veteran in Illinois.

Horton married Clare Drom in Antioch on November 20, 1923. After being married, Horton farmed, and later worked as a bookkeeper for Antioch Lumber. For awhile he made wooden rowboats and his wife would paint them.

Former Major Leaguer honored

Libertyville—Jersey and baseball hat clad little leaguers lined the seats of the Libertyville High School auditorium to listen to former Major Leaguer, Brett Butler.

The once overlooked and small-framed alumni of LHS returned Friday night to give inspiration to little leaguers and fans alike, and also receive the retired jersey of his not-so-glamorous LHS baseball days.

After graduating from LHS in 1975 Butler left his hometown since seventh grade and walked on to the Arizona State University baseball team in Tempe.

In 1981 he broke into the major leagues of baseball playing for five teams in his 16-year career.

Friday night, his high school recognized him for his accomplishments on and off the field. He was honored with the retirement of his old jersey, a banner donning his name and high school jersey number and multiple plaques from several village organizations.

School board votes against TIFs

Wauconda—The Board of Education of the Wauconda Unit District 118 approved a resolution opposing the creation of Tax Increment Finance districts within its boundaries to let all municipal leaders know for future reference.

The resolution was approved at the board's May 20 meeting and reads, "Be it resolved that the Wauconda Community Unit School District 118 Board of Education announces its opposition to Tax Increment Finance Districts within its boundaries."

The district has no jurisdiction over TIFs, but would be negatively affected, as all real estate taxes it and other taxing districts receive from a property would be frozen for 23 or 27 years, with all taxes off the property improvements going back to the developer for more improvements.

Traveling Vietnam Wall in RL

Round Lake—The Traveling Vietnam Wall will be displayed at Memorial Park on Cedar Lake Rd. through June 1.

On Monday, May 31, there will be a Memorial Day parade starting at 2 p.m. The procession leaves from the high school and will travel north on Cedar Lake Rd. to Memorial Park.

Following the parade will be the dedication of Memorial Park for the VFW's 100th anniversary. State and local officials will be speaking. The Men's Club will sponsor a fun-fair for kids, and all in uniform are invited to enjoy a free meal.

Round Lake takes Memorial Day very seriously, so come out and show your support for all the men and women who have served and died for our country.

Ryan's first round: honey, vinegar?

Gov. George Ryan, who garnered a solid plurality in Lake County in his successful gubernatorial campaign, compiled a helter-skelter first session record that bids well to leave voters here scratching their heads in wonderment. Or gasping for breath.

Why did they back the winner? And if they did, is he the same guy they thought he was?

For Lake County, Ryan is certain to get applause for his initiatives on tighter gun control, tougher crime laws, tax credits for school tuition and his Illinois FIRST infrastructure program that could mean millions of dollars in local roads and bridges, transit and school house expansion. A pretty impressive list of pluses for a governor to start a first term.

On the minus side, though, are tax increases covering liquor and a noxious notch up in higher license plate fees plus expansion of gambling. Ryan, the consummate wheeler-dealer, is determined to broker casino gambling for suburban Rosemont and the return of horse racing at Arlington Park. The governor also is pushing hard for the controversial third airport, a momentous project that is certain to send economic tremors to all corners of the state.

Illinois FIRST has historic potential—if Ryan doesn't have to drive taxpayers to the poor house to pay the bills. County motorists, agonizing for highway improvements, will find plenty to soothe the abused pocketbooks. Plans include: Rte. 22 upgrade ("Lake Zurich Bypass"); Rte. 120 (Grayslake) resurfacing, widening; Rte. 60 and Peterson Rd. intersection modernization; Rte. 83 (Lake Villa) Engle Dr. intersection remodeling; Rte. 12 (Wauconda) resurfacing from Rte. 120; Grand Ave. (Waukegan) Green Bay Rd. resurfacing, harbor access.

One thing that is admirable about the new governor is that there's a lot to be done and he's impatient to get going. At this point, Gov. Ryan doesn't appear to be pacing himself to ease his way into a campaign for a second term. Yikes, voters might even overlook Ryan's post inaugural gaffs like his Mansion swimming pool plan, overly generous staff pay raises and (heaven forbid) serving alcohol at state receptions.

Land gifts show changed attitude

Two extraordinary gifts of land for public stewardship underscore the dramatic change in attitude on the part of both private landowners and public agencies toward open space preservation. Coincidentally, both gifts involve Antioch residents and the Illinois Nature Preserves Commission.

An 11-acre site containing a grassy area, farm fields, a pond, wetlands and a marsh is named Brooklands Wood Reserve, the gift of Darrell May, whose family farmed the land. Joyce Weber donated 18 acres to be called Webber Wildlife Refuge containing a meadow, some woods, a former agricultural area and a pond.

In turning over their property for nature purposes, both May and Webber spoke of bad experiences in previous attempts at public acquisition through condemnation action involving the Lake County Forest Preserve Dist. The clumsy hand of public take nearly two decades ago set back the Forest Dist. immeasurably, adversely affecting the political careers of several leaders and giving the district a black eye.

In connection with the Nature Preserves Commission acceptance of the gifts, County Board Rep. Al Westerman (R-Waukegan) affirmed that heavy-handed tactics are a thing of the past. Westerman is chairman of land acquisition for the Forest Preserve Dist. That's good.

Westerman affirmed that negotiation is at the heart of all land transactions by the district. As the two gifts exemplify, when there is no coercion landowners can see or be shown the benefits of public preservation, either through a donation or outright sale. A healthy situation for everyone. That's double good.

VIEWPOINT

Silo dilemma engulfs council

Atattered old farm silo, standing naked and alone near the intersection of Rte. 60 and Butterfield Rd., holds an uncharacteristic fascination for Vernon Hills officials. They are considering relocating the silo to a park or an entry point of the village. There is $15,000 in the new $35.7 million budget to save the silo.

Mayor Roger Byrne and members of the council don't have much time to ponder the future of the silo, the lone remnant of a once prosperous farm at the location known as the Cold Spring Farm. A developer has served notice that the silo will be torn down June 13 to make way for the start of an assisted-living complex for senior citizens.

Village trustees hired a silo preservationist to advise them. Dismantling and rebuilding at a new location along with moving in one piece are the options, according to the expert. "Remember," the preservationist cautioned, "moving in one piece will involve cutting power lines." The silo, about three stories high, was used to store corn silage for the farm's herd of prize Holstein dairy cattle.

Preserving the Vernon Hills rural heritage isn't easy. The $15,000 budget item doesn't sound like it will go very far. Relocating London Bridge to a spot on a western desert ran into the millions. But preserving "priceless" antiques doesn't come cheap.

It's difficult to say whether an old silo suffering the pangs of 80 or more summers and winters falls in the category of a "priceless" antique. Apparently Vernon Hills officials think so.

What purpose would the silo serve as a marker or a monument? One reason might be a memorial to the farm couple who presided over the Cold Spring Farm for many years. Farm manager David Covert was a progressive dairyman who served as a 4-H leader. His wife, Lili, organized the first hot lunch program at Hawthorn School when it contained only two-rooms, serving as the cook.

Sentimentality expressed over the old silo is a new turn for Vernon Hills officialdom. In the past, bulldozer mentality has been the order of the day. Some years ago a 150-year-old farm house on Oakwood Rd., used for a time as offices of the Park District, wasn't given a second thought for preservation when it came time to relocate to larger quarters.

The Save the Silo movement is refreshingly quaint. Unfortunately, thanks to the Knock'em Downers, there's precious little of antiquity to preserve in one of Lake County's fastest growing communities. Maybe that's the fascination of the lonely old silo.

Delegates tour

Plans are being made at Great Lakes Naval Training Center to entertain a goodly number of the 600 persons attending the 1999 convention in Chicago of the U.S. Navy League. A base tour Wednesday, July 21, will be a high point for members of the Navy League, the civilian support arm of the Navy. Lake County Council President Kirt Quist is organizing a host committee.

False advertising?

Sharp-eyed observers of rampant development in west Lake County are getting a chuckle over the colorful and "creative" advertising being used to lure homeowners to the Valley Lakes project in Round Lake. One photo shows a father and son fishing. There is no lake. A young girl is playing tennis in another photo. No tennis courts. A boy is riding his bike on a trail lined by a rustic fence. No bike paths. The biggest laugh, according to the critics, is a shot of four pre-teens frolicking on a jungle gym—with a high rise office building in the background. No jungle gym. And no high rise—yet.

Museum tours

Bob Lindblad, the retired but not tired president of the Lakes Region Historical Society, relishes the opportunity to escort student groups through the two-story Main St. museum, Antioch's first grade school. Bob wasn't even winded after hosting three sections of third graders a few weeks ago, about 75 boys and girls in all. When asked about more student groups visiting, Bob promptly replied, "Contact us and we will do our best to do so."

Not for casinos

Despite support in Fox Lake and Waukegan for expansion of riverboat casino gambling, Lake County's House delegation in the General Assembly voted thumbs down, going against bi-partisan leadership backing. Republicans voting no were Mark Beaubien, Sidney Matthias and Andrea Moore. Democrats voting no were Susan Garrett and Lauren Beth Gash. Tim Osmond, Antioch Republican, was excused due to being treated for a heart problem.

Modest newsman

Bob Cromie, a model of modesty and self-effacement, was truly one of the great combat correspondents of World War II. Cromie held down a variety of assignments for his paper, the Chicago Tribune, always writing with taste, sensitivity and style. He once showed up at the Lakeland Newspaper offices, helping his wife, Alice, shepherd a group of Cub Scouts that included one of their sons on a tour. The legendary war reporter, following the boys, stepped into the writer's office, extended his right hand, and introduced himself, "I'm Bob Cromie." That was it. No shop talk. No elaboration. Then he retreated to the rear of the group. Bob Cromie passed away last Saturday at his home on Erhart Rd., rural Grayslake (Fremont Township) at age 90.

PARTY LINES

PARTY LINES, THE LAKELAND NEWSPAPERS' COLUMN OF POLITICAL OPINION, IS PREPARED FROM STAFF REPORTS.

New plans chief facing department dissidents

Phillip J. Rovang, age 53, should have a fast start as new director of planning and development for Lake County. At least, everyone was on the same page in his selection process.

Rovang was the choice of plan commission members screening more than 60 applicants. He also rated number one among County Board members involved in the final interview process at a day-long meeting. Rovang replaces mild-mannered Barry Hokanson who resigned after losing control of department personnel.

Rovang, a former Air Force and National Guard pilot will be able to put his military training to good use in the unruly department where demoted former director Bob Striker and his supporters among holdover staff frequently went out of their way to undercut Hokanson.

One of Rovang's high priorities will be putting department dissidents in their place.

School discord

Interim co-superintendents Don Klusendorf and Don Skidmore of Grayslake Elementary School probably won't be unhappy about relinquishing their temporary job. Percolating under the surface is inquiry of a citizens' group into possible insider sales of school bonds. The watchdogs want open and competitive bidding. Discord in the office reportedly is at the root of the resignation of business manager Orville Clark. Klusendorf, retired superintendent at Grant High School, Pappas: Will he consider another teen.

Welton: Provides comic relief and Skidmore, retired superintendent of Antioch Elementary, signed on to oversee the Grayslake District until a successor is hired.

Teen time?

With the resignation of Trustee John Erdman, there is speculation whether Fox Lake Mayor Jim Pappas will turn to another teenager to fill a vacancy on the village board. Pappas' appointment last year of a youth, age 18, to fill an open seat created state-wide interest.

Out of favor

Clayton "Chris" Christiansen is attributing politics to his forced retirement from the Lake County Zoning Board of Appeals. Christiansen, who served on the board more than 20 years, reportedly fell out of favor with the new board, especially Rep. Martha Marks (R-Riverwoods). Christiansen resides in the Zion-Wadsworth area.

Watch inflation

Members of the Lake Zurich Chamber of Commerce heard a noted economist explain how the scourge of inflation never goes away. Curt Hunter, senior vice president at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, outlined events that could cause interest rates to go up.

'Ask the Mayors'

Gurnee Mayor Dick Welton provided the laughs at the LMV's "Ask the Mayors" luncheon. When asked if the village board plans to raise the sales tax, Welton made the crowd roar with laughter when he said he would consider it after all of the building is done in the village. When will that be? Nobody can be quite sure. It could be a few years, or it could be a few decades. Mayors Duane Laska of Libertyville, Marilyn Sindles of Mundelein, Roger Byrne of Vernon Hills, and Tom Adams of Green Oaks also attended the luncheon.

Comics in demand at graduations

Wearing a maroon baseball cap with a gold tassel, the school's colors, actor-comedian Bill Cosby had some fatherly advice for Colgate University graduates:

"You're out of here," he told the audience in Hamilton, N.Y. "You can't sit around anymore. Get a job."

Cosby opened his gown to reveal sneakers, warm-up pants and a college sweatshirt. He looked and sounded like Dr. Cliff Huxtable, the character he made famous on television.

Cosby grinned at the 677 graduates and said, "Your rooms are as filthy today as they were when you graduated from high school. And we want them cleaned up."

Ah, yes, it's graduation season, that gratifying time of year when students finally are freed from the incarceration of education and delivered to the world of work.

It has been said there are few experiences in life more exhilarating than walking out of your last final exam.

And then comes graduation day when commencement speakers offer advice to kids who really don't want any.

Some of the speeches turn into MEGO events. (My eyes glaze over.) Instead of awe-inspiring, they become yawn-inspiring.

Unless, of course, the graduates are lucky enough to get a speaker with a light touch. And there is a trend in that direction.

Two of today's most popular pomp-and-circumstance personalities are 75-year-old baseball funny-man Yogi Berra and the 61-year-old Cosby.

Berra is a hit with his high-school drop-out demeanor and his litany of looney one-liners, such as: "Remember, whatever you do in life, 90 percent of it is half mental."

"When you come to the fork in the road, take it."

Cosby gives several commence-

Jerry Pfarr

ment speeches every spring. His favorite messages include:

"Pay off your student loans."

"Let me tell you how important I think teachers are. If God had created a teacher first, Adam and Eve would have been a lot better off."

"I don't know the key to success, but the key to failure is trying to please everybody."

Other commencement speakers this month have included Democratic presidential hopefuls Al Gore and Bill Bradley, actress Suzanne Somers, television anchorman Tom Brokaw, broadcasting and sports executive Ted Turner, and talk show hostess Oprah Winfrey.

Oprah, speaking in Atlanta, Ga., to 470 graduates at historically black Morehouse College, said, "God can dream a bigger dream for you than you can ever dream for yourself. Real success comes when you learn to act as if everything depends on you, and pray as if everything depends on God."

At George Washington University in Washington, D.C., William Rehnquist, chief justice of the Supreme Court, gave this excellent advice to graduates:

"For most of you, these diplomas end your university education. But don't stop now, college courses aren't the only way. There are libraries, galleries, theaters and museums, and you don't have to pay tuition for them. You'll find the more things you're interested in, the more enjoyable your life will be."

And here's my all-time favorite commencement line, coined by humor columnist Art Buchwald who told a graduating class: "We left you a perfect world, don't screw it up."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It is time to reevaluate our mission in Kosovo

We must far down the road to total tyranny when our government can feed us lies even a simpleton could see through. In a few minutes on the Internet, I can find the current address of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade, but our $50 billion a year CIA could not, nor could our $100 billion a year Air Force. Then we are expected to believe no one should be fired or demoted for this incredible act of incompetence/provocation. Finally, we are told a simple apology and monetary damage are all the Chinese are entitled to. The Iranians didn't even kill our embassy officials, but some how we must forget how we felt in 1980 when we deal today with the nuclear armed Chinese. But bald faced lying has been par for the course concerning our Kosovo War:

Milosevic had already agreed to an international military presence in Kosovo—indeed, 200 observers from the OSCE (Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe) had to be evacuated from Kosovo before the bombing began. What NATO insisted on, though, was free access to all of Yugoslavia (not just Kosovo) by armed NATO troops, aircraft, and tanks. This was the only point that Milosevic rejected. Could any sovereign country acquiesce to such foreign occupation? After a full year of rejecting one peace plan after another—one from the Patriarch of the Serbian Orthodox Church and another from Kosovar Albanian politician Ibrahim Rugova, to name just two—NATO decided to start bombing Yugoslavia to force Milosevic to accept terms that no head of state anywhere in the world could possibly agree to. The bombing violated the U.S. Constitution, the NATO Charter, the U.N Charter, the Geneva Accords and indeed every known precept of international law.

We have bombed a convoy of the very refugees we claim to be helping. We have bombed a bus of civilians off a bridge. We have bombed a train full of passengers. We have bombed bridges more than 500 years old, historical treasures of no conceivable military value. We are killing a couple of dozen innocent Serbs every day. The make-up girl in the Belgrade TV studio. The residents of apartments two blocks from a civilian factory. Just "collateral damage." We were horrified by the senseless loss of innocent life at Columbine High School; NATO has been providing a Columbine every day, a Waco every week, for a month and a half now, and charging American taxpayers upwards of two million dollars an hour to do so—to the accompaniment of pious cant against violence from a president who has bombed more countries during his administration than all others put together since the Second World War.

Previously I thought the most disgraceful act of the U.S. Government was the World War II concentration camps of innocent American citizens of Japanese descent. But at least that act of cruelty occurred during a time when the nation thought it was fighting for its life. There are no such extenuating circumstances for this insane war in Yugoslavia, the greatest act of barbarity every perpetrated in the name of the American people.

Bernardin amendment helps many Libertyville Township folk sometimes get a bad rap for being less than compassionate towards the most vulnerable of our society. That can no longer be said. The township voters passed this amendment on April 13 by 68 percent to 32 percent. There are 1.4 million people statewide without any health insurance, the biggest groups are 18 to 36 year olds and 50 to 65 year olds. With the tobacco settlements, Illinois has the potential to gain $360 million per year for the next 25 years. That sure could go a long way to get some kind of medical help for people without health insurance.

State Rep. Mike Boland of East Moline will take this cause to the General Assembly. If it passes both houses it would then come back to the voters where it would need 60 percent approval to become law. However, it turns out, 68 percent of Libertyville Township voters stood tall. There is only one disappointing part in all this. When I made the motion Jan. 14, to put this issue on the ballot, the "only senior trustee" that did not support it, is the "only trustee" that gets free health insurance from the Township taxpayers at a cost of over $6,000 a year for a part time job. I'm trying to figure out that logic.

University has support

In a letter, Douglas Ploss, of Antioch, expressed his opposition to the University Center concept proposed for Lake County. He also took issue with Rep. Susan Garrett's contention that "everyone" supports the University Center.

Ploss' notion is that if higher education is to be expended in Lake County, expand the College of Lake County to be a 4-year university. CLC is an outstanding community college offering associate degrees to many deserving students. I don't believe that CLC, or anyone, is suggesting that CLC be anything but the great community college that it is.

What the University Center concept offers is a centralized multi-university facility so that students can afford to further their higher education right here in Lake County. Too many students, for economic reasons, can't afford to go beyond the community college level. The University Center is a dynamic higher education concept working in other states, and Lake County can be the model for Illinois.

When Rep. Susan Garrett made reference to the widespread support for the Center, she was pointing to the support given it by all area legislators and the team effort to make it happen here.

Welcome to service

I want to welcome your publisher, Mr. Schroeder, to the world of underlings regarding his experience at the Lake County Forest Preserves District office. That gruff greeting he received is common and is a reflection of the Executive Director's "M.O." If I have the Executive Director figured right, by now Mr. Schroeder has received an apology and the "greeter" has received a bonus.

Paddling the land of Wow: Rivers of our national parks

We were a small flotilla of canoes and sea kayaks drifting down the Green River in Canyonlands National Park. Every day on the river we went deeper into wilderness. Every day we went deeper into ourselves.

Each bend of the river presented a new landscape: A falcon rising from a box canyon; a sheer sandstone wall a thousand feet high; an ancient shelter left by some extinct tribe.

We wanted to somehow quantify these scenes, to compare them. So we invented the Wow Factor. If we spied a new slickrock canyon and half of us said, "Wow," the scene earned a Wow Factor 5. If a certain quality of light caught almost everyone's eye, it received a Wow Factor 7. The ultimate scene left us all slack-jaw and amazed: Wow Factor 10.

National Parks, it seems to me, are the Land of Wow. Most national parks aren't designed around rivers. They are built around geologic features such as Yellowstone's geysers or Yosemite's granite, or historic sites like Gettysburg or Little Bighorn battlefields. Still, our finest rivers—those with the highest Wow Factors—flow through our national parks.

Every summer, millions of us launch our own personal adventures, heading for these select parks. RIVER Magazine has compiled a list of some of the best National Parks for river lovers. And if you go without a canoe or kayak atop your car, or without packing your flyrod ... well, don't blame us for the "wows" you miss.

Glacier National Park, Montana. Glacier Park is more accurately Glaciated National Park. The spectacular peaks and lush mountain cirques were sculpted by ice long ago. The actual glaciers you see are just remnants of their former selves and, alas, are melting fast.

But as they melt, glacial flour mixes with frigid runoff, tinting local rivers a striking, aquamarine. It looks like a photographer's trick with colored filters. That hue is what adds character to the Middle Fork of the Flathead, the river which forms the southern boundary to Glacier Park.

The Middle Fork is an official Wild-and-Scenic River, blessed with Class III rapids and favored by day-tripping rafters and kayakers. The river is flanked on one side by U.S. Highway 2, which provides easy access. Beyond, the forested mountains of the Great Bear Wilderness provide a rugged backdrop. The scenery attracted Meryl Streep and her film crew when Hollywood shot portions of "The River Wild" here. Watch for mountain goats which lick minerals from an escarpment above the river.

Fishing in the Middle Fork is regulated by the state of Montana. Until recently, the stream was reliable for native cutthroat and bull trout. Recent declines have prompted new restrictions, including mandatory catch-and-release for cuts.

The tumbling McDonald Creek, with water so clear it looks distilled, drains the park's interior. And on Glacier's eastside flow three shorter rivers: the Belly River, the Two Medicine, and the St. Mary. These are too small for floating, but they are sparkling companions for hiking and great places to see elk, bears, and other creatures.

Wow Factor? Water from Glacier Park flows into three of the world's four ocean drainages: The Pacific, Atlantic, and Arctic. One may climb atop Triple Divide Peak and stand above three drainages at once. Wow.

Superintendent, Glacier National Park, West Glacier, MT, 59936. Contact: (406) 888-7800. Grand Canyon National Park. Some five million visitors gaze into this chasm every year. But only a tiny fraction of them—perhaps 100,000 souls—actually visit the Colorado River itself. The Colorado flows through 227 miles of Grand Canyon National Park. Most visitors peer off the south rim, see the tiny trickle a mile below, and then rush to the Imax Theater in Tusayan to see the river on the big screen.

For those who prefer reality, there are three ways to visit the "inner gorge": by foot, mule, or raft.

Walking is arguably the best way to appreciate the depth and timelessness of the Grand. It's also the most physically demanding. There are people who have hiked down and back in a single day, but rangers strongly discourage it. The hike demands a 5,000-foot elevation change each way, often in blazing heat with no water. Good sense dictates hikers take at least two days. Look at it this way: It took a few hundred million years to build this canyon, so why rush?

Riding a mule is demanding in a different way, but still an adventure. The mule trains are a canyon tradition, dating to the days Teddy Roosevelt rode a particularly stout mule to the bottom. Phantom Ranch, on the river's edge, is a main destination for an overnight stay, via Bright Angel Trail from South Rim. Each year, 20,000 people raft the Grand Canyon. About two-thirds of those are clients in commercial groups and one third are private boaters. For many, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River is the ultimate rafting experience.

The trip can take weeks and includes mighty whitewater. However, demand for permits far exceeds supply, particularly if you don't hire an outfitter. If you start applying for a permit right now, count on waiting 10 years or more before you're rewarded. With the Grand Canyon's global reputation, don't expect the wait to get any shorter. A commercial trip eliminates the wait, but can cost $300 per person per day.

Wow factor? Watching a meteor shower zip from rim to rim on a moonless night while listening to the roar of a downstream rapid. Contact: Superintendent, Grand Canyon National Park, Box 129, Grand Canyon, AZ, 86023. Phone (520) 638-7888.

Tips combat summer skin risks

When it comes to summer, the big three skin risks are sun exposure, poisonous plants and nickel. The following dermatologist's tips will combat common skin risks for healthy skin all summer.

• Sun damage — "To reduce sun damage and cancer risk, use sunscreen liberally and daily," says Dr. Pamela Scheinman, dermatologist with the New England Medical Center. "When combined with other sun-avoidance behaviors, such as covering yourself with clothing, sunscreen reduces exposure to ultraviolet light that can lead to melanoma, as well as basal- and squamous-cell skin cancer."

Scheinman recommends sunscreens with an SPF of at least 15, available as lotions, gels and creams. She advises, "Be sure to apply liberally every day and at least 30 minutes before going outdoors. Use the waterproof form when swimming or during strenuous activity, and reapply often."

• Poisonous plants — Two-thirds of all Americans are allergic to poison ivy, oak or sumac. Reactions can begin 10 minutes after exposure, with blisters and itching lasting up to 10 days.

"The allergens are long-lived so direct contact isn't needed. Even petting a dog that has been through a poison-ivy patch can result in a reaction," says Scheinman. "Protection is available in over-the-counter products that are applied like a sunscreen to protect against the oils in these plants."

• Nickel rashes — Nickel, in jewelry, snaps and buckles, is the fastest-growing and biggest cause of contact skin rashes in North America today, says the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology. "Nickel allergies have increased 40 percent during the past five years," says Scheinman.

COLLEGE OF LAKE COUNTY BRIEFS

'Stayin' Alive' Task Force—'Buckle Up'

"Buckle up, drive sober and obey speed limits" is the message issued by the Lake County "Stayin' Alive" traffic safety task force to motorists next week, especially during the Memorial Day weekend. This driver safety message is delivered as part of National Buckle Up America Month observance from May 24 to 31.

"We want to make everyone aware of the importance of driving safely. The statistics on traffic fatalities and injuries are amazing," said Elizabeth Huntley, coordinator of the task force, which is based at the College of Lake County.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's National Center for Statistics and Analysis during the 1997 driving year, an estimated 6.7 million traffic crashes were reported by the police, with 41,697 fatalities and more than 3.3 million injuries. The report also showed that an average of 115 persons (one every 13 minutes) died each day in motor vehicle crashes and nearly two thirds of the passenger vehicle occupants killed were unrestrained.

Speeding contributed to fatal crashes that involved 37 percent of male drivers 15 to 20 years old, and speeding involvement by motorists in fatal crashes was twice as high compared to car and light truck drivers.

CLC honors graduates

The College of Lake County honored about 300 jubilant graduates who attended the 30th commencement ceremony at the college's Grayslake Campus.

The class of 1999 consisted of a total of 1,013 candidates, seeking 1,108 certificates and associate degrees. To be a candidate, a student must have filed a graduation petition and have completed graduation requirements by the end of the 1998 fall semester or intend to complete by the end of the 1999 spring semester or the summer session.

The class of 1999 was characterized by diversity in course study, age and gender. The college awarded 425 associate degrees in arts, 111 associate degrees in science, five associate degrees in engineering science, 277 associate degrees in applied science and 277 certificates.

The graduating class ranged in age from 16 to 70; the oldest graduate was Helen Chong of Waukegan and the youngest, Crystal Wilkins of North Chicago. The graduates consisted of 674 females and 339 males, and 62 percent of them attended Lake County high schools.

CLC to sponsor excursion to Brickyard 400 Race

A weekend of racing at the Brickyard 400 in Indianapolis is being sponsored by the College of Lake County student activities office Aug. 6 to 8. The trip includes round-trip coach bus transportation, two-night hotel accommodations at the Lafayette Ramada Inn and northeast vista track tickets. The cost is $245 for a single room or $222 for a double room per person. For reservations, call 543-2287. Visa, MasterCard, Discover and American Express are accepted.

Nurse assisting program

Registration is now underway for the College of Lake County's summer nurse assisting program, which begins June 7 at the Grayslake and Lakeshore (Waukegan) campuses. The seven-week course will meet state requirements for preparation for employment in long-term care facilities.

At Grayslake, the class will be offered with day and evening schedule options. The day section will meet from 8 a.m. to noon, Mondays through Fridays, and the evening class will be offered from 5 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. At Lakeshore, the class will be offered from 8 a.m. to noon, Mondays through Fridays. Clinical training will be held at various long-term care facilities in Lake County on selected days throughout the semester. Upon successful completion of the course, students will be eligible to take the state-mandated written competency examination for nurse assistant certification.

Applicants must be at least 16 years of age, must speak English and have at least an eighth-grade reading level. The cost for the program is $374 for in-district residents. For registration information, call the nursing education office at 543-2043.

SWALCO elects new chairman

A new chairman is at the helm of the Solid Waste Agency of Lake County. At the Board of Directors meeting, Dorothy "Connie" Schofield, president of the Village of Lake Barrington, was unanimously approved to chair the Agency.

Schofield fills the chairman vacancy created by the departure of Edwin Seidman, who served as a SWALCO representative as a former Trustee of the Village of Deerfield. Schofield has served on the SWALCO Board for four years, as a general member and as a member of the Executive Committee.

As the newly elected chairman, Schofield will complete the existing two-year term, which runs until May 2000. "The opportunity to continue to strengthen the county-wide municipal partnerships established by SWALCO to handle our garbage responsibly is an exciting and rewarding challenge," said Schofield. "The members and staff at the Agency work vigorously to develop solutions to the constant challenge of responsible trash management."

Schofield has been involved with a variety of solid waste management activities. In the early 1970s, she got the Girl Scouts in Wheaton, involved in glass recycling. "The Boy Scouts were already recycling paper, but I thought that there was room to recycle more," she stated. She convinced a local builder to donate a big construction truck which was quickly filled with glass during a weekend recycling drive. After delivering the truckload to an area glass plant, they received only $35 for the whole truckload. "After that hectic experience, my husband offered to just donate the same dollar amount to the Scouts, but we continued recycling for the principle, not the money," said Schofield.

Providing community service is an important area for Schofield. Over the past eight years, she has served as a Lake Barrington trustee for six years and, for the past two years, as president of the Village. She is also presently serving as the chairman of the Barrington Area Council of Governments.

SWALCO Board meetings are the fourth Thursday of the month at 7:30 p.m. at the U of I Extension office, U.S. Highway 45 in Grayslake.

Groups needed to provide supplies to homeless

With the PADS (Public Action to Deliver shelter) emergency overnight shelters in Lake County closed until Oct. 1, Connection Resource Services, Inc. is seeking volunteer groups to help provide lunches and other supplies for homeless people during the summer months. Each weekday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. the agency's PADS+Resource Center program provides individual counseling and referral assistance to homeless people in Lake County. They also provide access to laundry, showers, restrooms, telephone and mail.

Executive Director May Reddick reports that an average of 40 people come to the PADS+office each weekday seeking outreach help. Everyone who comes is given a sack lunch which may be the only meal some of the people get during the day. Lunches are donated by religious groups, organizations, corporations, clubs, individual, and families who put them together and deliver them to the PADS+Resource Center.

Other items that are in great demand this time of year include new underwear, small deodorants, disposable razors, fast food gift certificates, laundry products, used bath towels, and blankets. Those interested in helping can contact Marilyn Hlinak or Lynn Tracy at 689-4357, ext. 103 for details.

Home & Garden '99

Home-brewed compost — with a twist of peat

Homemade compost — sweet, rich and friendly — can use a helping hand in the garden; horticulturists extend its value dramatically with equally beneficial Canadian sphagnum peat moss.

Backyard composters, whose "product" is their pride and joy, mix leaves, grass clippings, kitchen scraps and anything else they can get their hands on (even weeds) into piles or bins, then throw in a bit of old compost to inoculate and jump-start the decomposition. If the piles are kept aerated and moist, a batch of useable compost can be finished in less than a month.

However, such "hot" composting is hard work and, since composting isn't a race, most folks simply pile it all up, mix it a time or two, and let it simmer slowly on its own for four or five months. It eventually works fine, though some bits may need sifting out to be composted again.

Whether you are a fast or slow composter, the finished product — full of life, dark, crumbly and packed with nutrients — is great for garden soil, and saves money on other soil amendments. However, there can be drawbacks.

Extension horticulturist Felder Rushing, a longtime composter from Miss., claims to be so proud of his home-grown compost, he almost wants to gift-wrap it. "But," he says, "compost alone doesn't cut it. Compost makes my soils sticky and easy to compact, then it quickly disappears, eaten up by microbes. Besides, there's never enough to go around; to keep my three bins working, I have to beat other composters to curbside piles of leaves and clippings, and I still can't make enough."

According to Rushing, even municipal compost, a great trend in recycling that he and other members of the Garden Writers Association actively support, has problems. "I use it, but it's highly variable, hard to haul and store, and may contain oak tannins or other impurities."

What to do? Rushing mixes his compost 50:50 with perfectly complementary peat moss. Even though sphagnum peat moss — especially the dependable, red-brown kind harvested from a tiny portion of literally millions of acres of high-grade sphagnum bogs in Canada — seems a bit pricey compared with homemade or municipal compost, it always has been a staple. It's a given to gardeners, because its universally acclaimed benefits far outweigh the cost. Canadian sphagnum peat moss binds sandy soils, aerates heavy or clay soils, holds moisture and nutrients, and lasts up to eight times as long as compost in the soil. It's also convenient, easy to use, stores well in its compact bag (which can be reused for garden chores) and, just as important, it is "predictable."

It's a win-win solution to soil-improvement dilemmas. Peat moss extends the volume and soil life of compost, and helps reduce soil compaction. It even can be mixed directly into compost bins as new batches are started, where it will help aerate the pile while grabbing and holding water (which is released slowly as needed, saving water and time). It traps nitrogen that otherwise would be lost as ammonia, and holds other valuable nutrients that leach from compost. When used as a "cap" on a compost pile, it can control occasional kitchen-scrap odors.

Say goodbye to grime with top 5 spring cleaning tips

As the seasons change, so does our notion of a clean house. Springtime has traditionally been seen as a sort of seasonal New Year. The cleaning products come out from your closet and the fresh scent of spring fills your home from basement to attic.

Cleaning can be fun and hard work at the same time. By taking advantage of the following spring cleaning tips, you can make the job easier and more efficient for your whole family.

1) Clean Your Windows, But Not on A Sunny Day.

After the weather warms, spring cleaners often rush to clean the dirt and grime that has built up on their windows over the winter. After all, it may have been a long time since you've last seen the green of your lawn and garden. However, you should avoid cleaning windows on a sunny day because they will dry too quickly and produce unattractive streaks. Overcast days, while less spring-like, are your best bet.

2) When Using A Cleaning Compound, Have Patience.

Removing dirt and grease from your woodwork, walls and floors is hard work for you and your cleaning product. So don't make the work any harder by scrubbing a surface before the compound has had a chance to work. "Not giving the compound time to loosen the grease or dirt is a common mistake of spring cleaners," says home-care expert Gerry Luepke.

3) Keep a Multi-Purpose Cleaning Product on Hand.

Speaking of cleaning agents, it's always crucial to have a multi-purpose cleaner on-hand for the varied cleaning tasks that inevitably arrive each spring.

"Multi-purpose cleaners are wonderful because they save you the trouble of buying specialty products for every household task," notes Luepke, who gives household advice daily via a toll-free consumer information hotline. "With a quick trip to your local hardware or grocery store, you can purchase a cleaning product such as Professional Strength Soilax."

Professional painters have used Soilax for years to clean walls before they paint because it requires no rinsing. It's also imperative for the walls to be clean in order to insure proper paint adhesion.

Soilax is also a good cleaner for removing dirt, scum and mildew from vinyl siding, deck and patio furniture and much more. Luepke suggests the following recipe:

- 1/3 cup powdered laundry detergent
- 2/3 cup Soilax
- 3 quarts water

NOTE: When Mildew is a problem, add 1 quart 5% chlorine bleach

4) Combat Unwanted Kitchen Odors with Ease.

Two areas in your kitchen that are likely to house unwanted scents are the refrigerator and the garbage disposal. Keeping an open box of baking soda in your refrigerator is an invaluable and inexpensive way to keep it smelling as fresh as the rest of your newly cleaned home.

To fight the stench of a garbage disposal simply place an orange or lemon peel down the drain. The pleasant smell of fruit will linger.

5) Add Sachets to Your Drawers and Closets

Have you ever opened a trunk or closet that has been locked away all winter? Odds are you were greeted by a scent that made you want to give up cleaning. Placing sachets in your drawers and linen closets will keep them smelling sweet throughout the long winter.

If you have problems with musty odors, try placing cedar chips into the sachets. It's an inexpensive trick that works wonders, particularly if you live in a heavily wooded area. Cedar chips work best for sweater drawers and other storage areas that compliment the smell of cedar. Lingerie drawers beware!

For more tips and information, you can contact Gerry Luepke at (800) 284-2023.

What is cleaning food for if the surface still looks old and dingy? After properly preparing the surface, a fresh coat of paint usually puts new life into the look of your home.

Keep your lawn and garden weed-free

Weeds. A recent survey calls them the No. 1 gardening headache, and is it any wonder? Drive by any suburban yard and you'll see neighbor upon neighbor hunched over their lawns and gardens, working feverishly to eradicate every single dandelion.

Weeding doesn't have to be a dreaded, backbreaking chore. "There are simple solutions to make pulling weeds quicker and easier," says gardening expert Gerry Hood. According to Hood, the top trick to keep your lawn and garden weed-free is to add plenty of Canadian sphagnum peat moss to the soil in order to loosen the soil, resulting in easier weed pulling. Simply work 2 inches of peat into the top 6 inches of soil before planting.

"The bottom line is that you need healthy soil," says Hood. "Healthy soil is like an immune system. It keeps all the plants stronger so they're better able to crowd out weeds."

For a free brochure on weed prevention and other gardening tips, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope with 55 cents postage to Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association, Dept. GT99, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN 55438.

Traditional kitchens are really cooking

If the year 2000 has you picturing the kitchen of the future, it doesn't look anything like George and Judy Jetson's. The majority of homeowner's still opt for traditional decor over gloss and metal, and that's a trend that will continue.

According to a recent American Express Retail Index, 90% of new cabinets are wood. In appliances, almost half of homeowners (45%) will choose white or almond over stainless steel. Over half of remodelers will choose laminate and ceramic tile for countertops. Popular looks in the kitchen include a breakfast table, stools, islands and baker's racks. These are the favored elements used to create warm, welcoming kitchens in an array of styles from Tuscan to Shaker.

The real beauty of these kitchens is in the fact that traditional style and high performance are not mutually exclusive. Today, there are appliance makers whose own specialty of the house is to offer the latest technology in designs which complement a great many settings. Increasingly, appliances offer the technology and techniques familiar to a professional chef. While these appliances are getting closer to the restaurant versions, they don't make a home kitchen look like one. Heavy metal, commercial-style machines aren't for everyone's dream kitchen.

Some of the once future features available today include: high performance electric burners which morph from round to roaster shape making the process of reducing pan drippings an easy task; halogen lighting that spotlights the inside of the oven, and expanded 12-rod broiling areas for uniform results when preparing larger meals.

Other high-tech features include the closed door broiling option which turns an oven into an indoor grill, gas cooktops with the option of wok cooking and electric burners that are almost as quick as gas. For example, on the recently introduced line of Bosch electric cooktops, burners heat up in less than 4 seconds. Increasingly popular are ovens that do both conventional and convection baking.

For appliances with maximum style versatility, look for downdrafts that "come and go" and flush-mount electric cooktops. These units are designed to be as level with the surrounding countertop as possible and yet be spillproof containing up to a quart of liquid. If a "hidden" appliance is the sought after look, the American-made Bosch dishwasher is truly integrated, meaning that the controls are inside the open door and the entire front is matched and seamlessly blended with all the horizontal lines of the surrounding cabinetry.

Appliances have yet to prepare our meals or clean up, but when that day comes, they probably still won't look the way the creators of the Jetsons imagined. They will be designed to suit a variety of styles, most certainly that which will still be called traditional.

Bosch appliances are featured at major appliance and kitchen showrooms across the country. To locate a local Bosch dealer, call 800-866-2022 or visit the website at www.boschappliances.com.

How To Survive The Job Search

By Nancy Sakol

Q: I read your column all the time but this is the first time that I have written you with a problem. I hope you can help fast. I accepted a position with (name withheld) back in March while finishing my last semester away at college. I was recruited, interviewed and the plan was to start employment with them June 14th after graduation. Three weeks prior to graduation, I found out that I did not receive a passing grade in a course which would cause me to have to repeat a course in order to receive my diploma. The company that is to employ me told me during the interview that a college degree was a requirement. Although, I can take a course locally and finish by summer's end. My family is telling me to come clean and tell the hiring authority exactly what happened with the hope that they will understand. My friends are telling me not to say anything to the company and finish up like I plan to and maybe nobody will have to know. It is a good position with a good starting salary in my field and I would hate to lose out on this opportunity. Please tell me what you think I should do. Time is running out. Thanks for your help. D.G. - Lake Bluff

A: Come clean! It would be wise to contact the company immediately and ask to come in and meet with them prior to the date of start. Your honesty will be much more appreciated than if you were to hide the fact. Ask yourself what kind of compromising situation you would put yourself in if you were to start with the company on June 14th and go through the motion as if nothing were askew. Imagine Human Resources requiring you to submit a copy of your college diploma...Imagine the compounded lie. Now think of yourself coming forth with the information, getting it off your chest and starting out clean. Perhaps the company will let you know that they appreciate your honesty. Perhaps they will tell you that they will make a concession that will allow you to finish this one course in the evening with the intent that you have until the end of this semester to produce the document. Perhaps, they will inform you that there is nothing they can do at this time because it is corporate policy that the position hires only college degree individuals and therefore they have to stick to their policy. There may be the possibility that if the latter be the case, that they would be willing to make the concession for you to come on board in another capacity until you have finished. Whatever the outcome, listen to your family. Coming clean is always the best way. No one could ever say that you tried to pull one over on them. The company will appreciate your situation and your honesty. Drop me a note and let me know how it comes out. Good luck.

HAPPY MEMORIAL DAY!

PLEASE DON'T DRINK & DRIVE!

MEMORIAL DAY SHOULD BE A DAY TO REMEMBER THOSE LOST ON FOREIGN BATTLE FIELDS...

Jeff Boise, the 17-year-old driver was killed on 3-7-90. The other driver was impaired.

Not on Illinois Roadways.

Memorial Day Weekend is one of the three summer holiday weekends that ranks #1-2-3 in the number of alcohol related crash fatalities.

Don't be a statistic--Designate a driver if you are celebrating, and always, always buckle up.

A reminder from Mother's Against Drunk Driving of Lake County.
